THE MAESTRO AT WORK: Haymo Taeuber, conductor of the Monterey County Symphony, rehearses the orchestra in preparation for opening night next week. This week has been designated "Symphony Week" in recognition of the orchestra's contribution to our cultural heritage. For the full story, see page 5.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor:

Let's use the facilities that we have!

The high school pool is open for two more week-ends for recreational swimming for all of the public to use.

If we show enough interest in its use it may be kept open for the month of October (our loveliest time of year). Enough interest is 15 people.

The family card that is purchased in the summer for $10 is good for the full year of recreational swimming.

Maybe we can convince the Recreation Department to open for Spring vacation and following week-ends.

This pool is bought and paid for and needs to be used. The location is good. Please use what we have before we ask for more.

If your child attended the instructional lessons during the summer now he can practice and be more proficient.

If you are interested in keeping the pool open longer for the use of our young people, call me at 624-1474 and let's see what we can do about it.

The Editor:

My husband and I read with interest the "Constitution Day" article by C.A. De Camp. Most appropriately it appeared on September 17th, which is U.S. Constitution Day. Oftentimes it is called American Citizenship Day because so many millions of those who were not born in this country have become naturalized American citizens.

Deeply conscious of the great significance of Constitution Day, we both gave expression to our feeling by flying the American flag in front of our home on September 17th. Some people might consider it old-fashioned to observe it in this manner, but we believe that both the Constitution and the American flag should be so honored by all citizens, both native-born and naturalized.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Viki Drizari

Editor, Carmel Pine Cone

Though it was somewhat late to be effective, your Sept. 17th call to fly the flag on Constitution Day was most welcome to all Americans having any realization of the "stupendous inheritance" left us by our fathers (who died willingly that we might come into it.)

Coming at this time, we were especially struck with Col. De Camp's closing question, as to who should fail to fly the flag in view of the fact that some forty-three thousand of our own precious sons have died in Vietnam to preserve this inheritance for us. It is very sad indeed that many of them had to die in the knowledge that they were giving their lives for the final security of so many of their countrymen, so indifferent to their heritage as to fail to fly the flag in honour thereof.

I have a son, who upon returning from Vietnam on an Army intelligence assignment, where he knew the ins and outs of the entire situation in great detail, ended up with an hundred per cent disability discharge.

He had been an intimate witness to the tragedy of our men giving their lives for people back home having so little gratitude for their country and its defenders, as to fail in even so small an acknowledgement as flying the "Glorious Ensign of the Republic" on anniversary occasions.

I know how deeply it grieved him, as well as it does me, his mother.

Thanks again for reminding us of Constitution Day.

Gratefully,

EYING LAST week's Pine Cone cover, a Carmel businessman exclaimed, "She's hiding her face-must be ashamed of herself!"

SOME HATS worn by Carmel's older ladies remind one of the story of the California woman who visited kin in Boston. Her hostess relative gave a tea for her, the guests, middle aged and more, all appearing properly hatted and gloved.

The gloves were standard, but the hats the California visitor found strange and wonderful. Summoning up her nerve, she asked one of the guests, "Tell me, where do you and your friends get your hats?"

"My dear," replied the proper Bostonian, "we don't get out hats—we have them!"

YELLOW CABS aren't yellow—in Carmel—and neither are cab drivers merely hackies. A while ago, a local lady who no longer drove her own car became a regular customer. Because she tended to be forgetful, her "regular" driver always waited to see that she got back into her house safely.

Well, the l.o.l. hadn't lost her key this time, but she couldn't unlock the door with it. The cabbie tried and realized the door was locked—with another key—from the inside, which prevented the outside key being used. Another occupant must have locked up, then left by another exit.

Cabbie got out his car tools, jimmied a window too high to boost the lady through, climbed in, unlocked the door from the inside, and let in his passenger. P.S. She gave him half a homemade cake as well as a handsome tip.

WHERE ELSE but here can you stand six feet from your plum tree, in earshot of Ocean Avenue and Highway traffic sounds, and watch a boy hummingbird pour out his heart to a girl hummer perched a foot above him. She is indifferent. He hops to a higher twig and chirrs out his reedy love song. She preens her wing feathers, then flies off to a nearby oak. He is momentarily disconsolate and stilled. Then he jets off after her. The view is obscured.

Wolves (the friendly type) have their day

"It was a tossup who had the most fun—the children or the wolves," said Canadian & American Wolf Defenders president, Mrs. Victor Colton.

She was referring to the picnic and film show held on Sunday, September 20, in Carmel Valley, and at Carmel High School.

The picnic which took place in the woodsy setting of the Carmel Valley Trail and Saddle Club, was attended by some forty members of the Canadian & American Wolf Defenders, and their guests, including many children.

Most honored guests, canidae lupi (wolves) silver Jethro, and black Clem, had travelled from Hayward with their owners, Mr. and Mrs. John Harris and several friends. They made it plain that they considered the rough-and-tumble of childish affection absolutely the greatest. They accepted rapturously all the hugging and kissing and came back with more of their own. The apprehensions of parents evaporated with the obvious love and understanding between children and wolves.

At the film show at Carmel High School the scene was repeated. The overflow audience in Brey Hall, one-third of which was children, gasped as the two wolves made their stately entrance. The next moment the animals were lost to sight beneath an avalanche of children. Small faces were washed as small hands patted, and tugged, and pulled, and small bodies threw themselves on the big furry animals.

The adult audience applauded the final film, "Your Yard - Their Sheep", made by Defenders of Wildlife, which showed the destruction of public lands by the over-grazing being done by sheep.

The donation made by the audience was presented to John Harris' organization, The North American Association for the Preservation of Predatory Animals.

LAFFS EXPECTED AT DONKEY BASEBALL

The "laugh riot of the season" will be held Saturday at 3 p.m. at the Carmel Valley Lions Little League Park on Paso Hondo Road as the Mission 200 Lions Club of Carmel challenge Carmel Valley Lions to a Donkey Baseball Game.

Ron Roberts will captain the Carmel's Mission 200 Club and Dick McKenzie will lead the Carmel Valley Lions.

All of this action promises a fun-filled afternoon for the club membership and their many friends who turn out. Proceeds benefit the Youth Center and Gray "Y" clubs of the Peninsula. Tickets are available at the gate for $1 adults and 50c for children.

The Carmel Valley Lionettes will serve sandwiches and refreshments.

the mayor's report

By BARNEY LAIOLO

IT DISPLEASES ME to have to take issue with some of Mr. Norberg's remarks in the Sept. 17 issue of the Pine Cone. Some of his points are known and well taken but others require a broader explanation.

With reference to the City's financial loss at Sunset two points must be considered. The first, rentals at Sunset were set at a very low 10c a square foot basis. This amount taken as a comparison to downtown rents barely touches the direct costs of operation—namely heat, electricity, water and janitorial costs. Also, to be considered are gardening and general maintenance. It must be remembered that this structure has many hard miles behind it.

The second point to remember is that the monies used for this operation are derived from hostelry tax and not a direct cost to the taxpayer. The Cultural Commission and the Council are presently working toward a more equitable solution to this problem. As far as the remarks of who made any gain, I feel this is a direct and liable assault on the non-paid members of any body related with Sunset, who give of their time with no strings attached.

Regarding parking at Sunset, the area is posted "Free Parking" and is open to anyone who wishes to use same.

I MUST ADMIT that I too have found several times that use of the rented areas was very light. On several occasions only one or two studios were open. My feeling regarding this problem is that an understanding with the tenants regarding minimum hours to be open must be accomplished. This is the only way that all tenants at Sunset in general can succeed. I still feel that some kind of light refreshments or a limited type of eating facility should be located there if it can be accomplished without affecting the overall operation.

It will possibly be remembered that I personally supported the move to Sunset of City Hall. However, after several study sessions, the Commission felt that the space required would be more useful for other purposes. I am certain that the Commission is on the right track toward the ultimate goals—more extensive use of the auditorium, seminars, local plays, youth participation programs, etc. I know there are several dedicated people willing to help on "special issues" but it's quite difficult when this becomes a "full time job."

THE SPECIAL MEETING held last week with the Cultural Commission, Council, and the Library Board, and the public, to examine the model designed by Keeble and Rhoda for the new library building was well received and now the Library Board will continue its studies and suggestions in order to proceed with this project.

Carmel charisma:*PART I OF A SERIES:

Before the beginning

This article introduces a new writer to Pine Cone readers, Mellon Hunton. Now making her home in Carmel Valley, Mrs. Hunton was a frequent contributor to Bay Area periodicals. She has two non-fiction books to her credit.

By Mellon Hunton

It was called Padre Junipero Serra's rosary.

It was a mission trail from San Diego up the California coast to Sonoma with missions forty miles apart, judged to be the distance travelers could make a day in the hot California sun.

In 1769 Padre Serra made his second expedition to America, this time with Jose de Galvez, Spanish Colonial administrator. They landed in San Diego and rested at the mother mission, Mission San Diego de Alcalá, the first in the rosary.

Father Serra had just completed three years in working with the Indians in the Sierra Gorda and was able to speak many of the tribal languages. He helped the Fathers at San Diego in directing the farming and in keeping the Indians busy with bead work and fashioning jackets from the hides of rabbit or deer.

Sometimes a few strings of beads or moccasins would bring a sturdy pair of oxen in trade. And the fruits and wine might be exchanged for valuable lengths of cloths from merchants in the nearby settlements.

Shortly, Padre Serra with several Francisco monks moved on up the coast bent upon founding a mission in Alta California and in subduing the hostile Indians. They walked, rode mules and drove their oxen with carts of water, fruits, nuts, kettles, candles and blankets. It was a long, tiring journey as there was no mission farther north.

At first the missionaries could not locate Monterey into whose bay Don Sebastian Vizcaino had sailed in 1602. The don had christened the port after his Spanish patron, Count de Monterey, in the name of his king, Philip III of Spain.

Some of the more trepid of Serra's group returned to the long trail back to San Diego when the little hamlet of Monterey could not be sited. There was always the fear of the fatal arrow from the redmen; the news was not yet old about the massacre by the Indians just six months ago at San Diego de Alcalá. But there seemed more security within the walls of a compound than in the wind-swept hills which seemed to mock the party.

Those who remained with the Padre were repaid in beauty and bounty, as on the dawn of the third day, high on a cypress hill, the party saw the glistening sweep of azure and white and in its crescent crude moorings for fishing craft while the clear sky was flecked with birds. A fishing village! The taste of fresh fish was already theirs.

Serra soon began exploring. Clad in his long, gray robes, the priest walked slowly over the hills looking for the perfect site for his second mission to be named Mission San Carlos Borromeo, honoring the archbishop of Milan who died in 1538. Finally, Serra selected a secluded green meadow near the blue waters of Carmelo Bay, so named by Vizcaino for Mt. Carmel in the Holy Land.

Seated as it was at the mouth of a fertile valley, the monks would have little difficulty in farming. A winding river laced the west boundary keeping the soil from caking and the cove of the bay would moisten and cool the crops and spare the precious fresh water.

Father Serra had little trouble with nature's bounties; his work was directed to the heathen Indians. He started to study a new tribal language, that of the Eslenes tribe which surrounded the area. He had learned to talk with these men, give them trinkets and praise. He taught them the phrase, "Amar a Dios" and they would grin and salute him in greeting.

The tribe was ridden with disease and they would squat in their near-nakedness and smoke their long pipes with their bows and arrows within arm's reach, a constant threat to any conversion to Christianity. Yet these primitive, elf-like leathery men were needed to support the physical labors of building and maintaining the missions.

In turn they had care and blankets and food and comforts never before known to them. They had administration to their spiritual needs, too, if they would allow it. Many would not. Many thousands did.

The men in the long grey robes went fearlessly about. Their duties were many. Directing the Indians in watering the stock, sowing the fields and tending the grounds of the huge compound, and in lighting the long tapers come evening down the long corridors and at the crucifixes. And kneeling and praying. Always kneeling and praying.

Some evenings just at dusk when there was only a silver sliver of a moon appearing there would be a stir in the tall grasses. The Indians would dart for their bows and arrows. Some would bare knives. Would the bear or the big cats come this close? The flicker of candles would usually ward off the big game.

The monks, their sandals flapping, their robes sweeping would scurry to face the noise. Perhaps Indians from another tribe? The affluence and security and the lights of the compound might attract them. Or perhaps members of this tribe, those resentful and not yet civilized?

Faith, alone, kept the dedicated Fathers fearless in their task.

Often, the priests would build a great fire just outside the mission's walls, at the edge of the orchard. Here they would discuss theology and the future of their works. They would sit on rough benches and nibble at big wheels of cheese made in the mission from goat's milk. And they would drink the warm wine from the fruit in the orchard which was planted so short a time ago, while the Indians would crouch like wary animals listening in the shadows and understanding so little.

Slowly, ever so slowly, the Indians were taught. They were taught confidence and faith in the white man and they were taught cleanliness and sexual restraint. They were taught trades and agriculture. They were taught some words of Spanish. And they were taught Christianity.

The Indian population in the fertile valley bordered by an azure bay and a friendly river was becoming civilized. There were fewer deaths from consumption and venereal disease in just ten months after Father Serra started his great task. There was less plunder and rape and incest and slowly as the redman's burden lessened, the white man's increased. But together they would build.

And for a few short years they did.

As the long tapers at Mission San Carlos de Borromeo were snuffed, perhaps Father Serra whispered: "Who may surmise, from this very mission there may one day emerge a hamlet called, CARMELO!"

Padres spirits high after tying Alisal; face Woodrow Wilson at home Sat.

The Carmel High School Padres football team goes against a team they don't know much about when they meet Woodrow Wilson of the San Francisco City League in a non-league game at Bardarson Field Saturday at 2:30 p.m.

Carmel High graduates and former Padres Mitch Kastros and Chris Smith scouted Woodrow Wilson in their close loss to Oakland High School Friday and reported that they play a "Pro T" offensive formation with a spread line, split ends and pro-set backs.

"They throw the ball a lot," coach Jason Harbert said Tuesday. "They have a lot of speed, a fine passer and play a wide-open game."

Harbert reported that his team, which was "pretty well banged up Saturday night" against Alisal, which Carmel tied 28-28, "is trying to mend." None of the injuries is serious, he said, although there is fear that a continuing sore knee sustained by ace defensive tackle Rick Bowen might sideline Bowen for the Wilson game.

As expected, Alisal proved to be an extremely "physical" team, said Harbert.

"We're feeling pretty good about Alisal," he said. "Our spirits are up. We thought our kids did a great job. Alisal's real tough this year."

Harbert said he was "especially happy the way we came back in the third quarter. In the last part of the second quarter we were taking a pretty good physical beating. Our kids came out in the second half and, gosh, they beat 'em. This is going to be a hard group to beat."

Sophomore running back Jerry Argust, who scored twice on passes and once on a kick-off return, "did just a fantastic job of running," said Harbert. One Carmel High student spectator described Argust's hands as "spiderwebs" in their relationship to a thrown football.

"He just reaches out there and, 'schlup,' brings it in."

Harbert also liked the running of fullback Jim DeAmaral inside the opponent's 10-yard line.

Quarterback Jimmy

Conlan is "getting a little better every week" running options, the coach said.

Films of the Alisal game viewed by the Padres

Monday night revealed outstanding offensive blocking by tackle Chris Foley, guard Jim Arnn and end Hans Smith, said Harbert.

Record number of entries at Sand Castle Contest

Women's Lib is now digging into the 9th annual Great Sandcastle Contest of Carmel, sponsored by the Monterey Bay Chapter of the American Institute of Architects, which is to be held this Sunday at Carmel Beach at the base of Eighth Street.

Grand Sand Marshall Don Brown announces that, as a salute to the gallant "Liberated Ladies," half of the judges this year are ladies. Selection of judges has been made on the basis of qualifications, with the prime qualification for all that sand-walking being a good pair of web feet.

It is anticipated that the Contest will have a record-breaking number of shovellers this year, so participants are invited to come early and pick a good pile. High tide on Sunday will be at 9:56 a.m. and low tide will be 3:38 p.m. Judging will begin at 2 p.m.

Prizes will be awarded in two major categories: Novice Sand Pile and Advanced Sand Box.

A special Bi-centennial prize this year will be the Father Serra Award for the sand creation which most uniquely captures the spirit of Old California. A grand prize and the all-time favorite, Sour Grapes Award, will also be given.

The contest is open to all.

It is free.

No rules.

No regulations.

No dogs.

CASTLE OF SAND: One of the award-winning entries from last year's Sandcastle Contest is viewed by charmed onlookers. This year's version of the popular event will be held Sunday on Carmel Beach at the base of Eighth Street.

The conscience of Carmel

What were those 'firsts' anyway?

By GUNNAR NORBERG

"What do you mean when you talk about all those premieres in Carmel? About the original plays given initial productions here? About what you call all those 'firsts' on the Carmel stage? About community participation in creative theater? And just what were those plays by the great ones in the world of letters, which first saw the light of day—or, more precisely, the light of night staging, on some indoor or outdoor Carmel stage?"

These questions are a kind of synthesis of the sort of inquiries the recent PINE CONE articles about the local creative theater in Carmel, and its proposed revival through city initiative, have elicited from readers.

Let's look back some three score years, for it is at the beginning of that span of time, that creative theater first began to make a name for Carmel, and first started to become a factor in bringing to Carmel, some of the extraordinary people from all over the country and all over the world, who variously left their imprint upon Carmel and upon whom Carmel reciprocally made its own special mark.

While the year 1910 is usually considered the great first year when original theater emerged in Carmel with the opening of the outdoor Forest Theater, and while the late Herbert Heron who founded that theater, is usually identified as the 'father' of local creative theater, events and personalities of even earlier times are sometimes mentioned.

There was the dynamic real estate developer, Frank Devendorf, back in 1903, who circularized certain segments of the California populace of that day, and who announced forthrightly that what the then neophyte Carmel wanted was 'brain-workers.'

Then there was the devastating 1906 earthquake which led to an exodus from San Francisco, of many persons from all walks of life, including some with emerging or established reputations in arts and letters, who chose to make Carmel their next homes.

One of the pre-1910 visitors to Carmel was Adela Rogers St. John—who points out that she "was a very little child" when she first came, but that she has repeatedly returned for varying stays through the years whenever she has had a heavy burden of creative writing to do—because elsewhere she "couldn't get it done so well as here." (She is a god-child of Jack London, another early Carmelite, whose first play, called "The First Poet," premiered in Carmel back in 1915. London himself was a member of the producing group, called the Western Drama Society, which presented it in the Forest Theater.)

An even earlier comer to Carmel, was David Starr Jordan—ichthyologist, philosopher, writer in many fields, who became Stanford University's greatly distinguished first president. But let us not deviate. Let's get back to those questions with which we started.

There was, of course, that 1910 opening play in the Forest Theater, "David," written by Constance Lindsay Skinner, who became noted as an author of adventure books, often dealing with the far North (she was born in the Canadian Yukon).

In the same outdoor theater, through the years, there were many original plays produced. There was "The Toad" by Bertha Newberry, and "Wife of Nippon" by Redfern Mason. Then there was the premiere of "Fire" written by Mary Austin, who is still today considered by many as one of the great writers of the present century.

Another 'first' in the Forest Theater, was "The Talisman" by Raine Bennett, and this was followed (in 1914) by "Sons of Spain" (the first play by Sidney Howard who later won Pulitzer Prize distinction for "They Knew What They Wanted").

Three original pageants were first produced here—Perry Newberry's "Junipero Serra" in 1915; Garnet Holme's Serra" in 1922; and George Marion's "Apostle of California" in 1935.

One Forest Theater 'first' as a play—"Yolanda of Cyprus" by the noted poet, Cale Young Rice—later was rewritten as a grand opera, and premiered in that form in 1929 in Chicago.

Notable plays for children (also enjoyed by most adults) have had first performances (and repeated performances) here: "Confounding the Witch" by Grace Wickham and James Hopper; and "The Inchling" and "Mr. Bunt," both by Ira Remson. All these were first staged here in the 1922-24 period, as was also "The Cradle" by Helen Coale Crew.

Three original plays by the late Herbert Heron—a one-time mayor, book-seller, and man-of-all-work in the local theater for over half a century—have been mentioned before in this series: "Montezuma," premiered in 1914; "Tusitala," in 1916; and "Pharaoh," in 1949.

Landmark event in the local theater was the world premiere of the late Robinson Jeffers' "Tower Beyond Tragedy" which took place at the Forest Theater in 1941. A Broadway star, Judith Anderson, came from New York to Carmel just to play in this theater 'first' and drama critics from all over the country 'covered' the opening.

An adaptation of "Alice in Wonderland" by Perry Newberry and Thomas Vincent Cator (who later became a noted figure in modern music), was first seen here in Carmel.

Two Martin Flavin plays were premiered here—"Amaco" and "Sunday." (Flavin achieved distinction not only as a playwright but also as a novelist—his novel, "Mr. Littlejohn," won a national literary award.)

Byington Ford, now a retired realtor and land developer, directed the first presentation of Flavin's "Sunday." He also played the lead in the premiere here in 1935, of John Patrick's first play, "Glory Lane." He recalls that Patrick then lived "just around the corner from the Forest Theater." (Patrick eventually won a Pulitzer Prize for his dramatization of "Teahouse of the August Moon.")

Other originals first seen in Carmel, were Charles Van Riper's "Treasures" and his "Carmel Follies"; Maurice Browne's "The Mother of Gregory"; Dan Totheroh's "The Princess Salome"; and Richard Masten's "The Devil Who Saw God." (Totheroh later won acclaim as a writer both on Broadway and in Hollywood.)

Two generations of Mastens contributed to Carmel's theater 'firsts.' Richard Masten's son, Rick—now a lecturer and instrumentalist traveling a national church circuit—co-authored, co-directed, and co-produced a series of popular musicals here in the early 1950s: "This Is It," "That's the Ticket," "What the Dickens," "Baby Be Still," and "The Silver Star." His collaborators were Owen Greenan, Don Adams and Mike Monahan. Nowadays Monahan operates a theater service in the Los Angeles area, while Greenan is still busy here seeking a wider recognition as playwright and novelist, and Adams has become a Monterey businessman.

Other original musicals first seen here, were Jerry De Bono's "Eight and Runn" and "Whoops." Another original first produced here, was Ben Maddow's "Spring Out of Season." (Both De Bono and Maddow later became film and TV writers in Hollywood.) Still other Carmel 'firsts' were Ron Bostwick's "High Mesa" and "Time of the Tiger."

Perhaps some of you, who read this, may know of other 'firsts' in the local theater. (Since there is no historical museum functioning here, as yet, there is no continuous record maintained, of what has occurred.)

Even with this probably incomplete record of 'firsts,' Carmel's record in creative theater may still conceivably have surpassed that of any city in the country with as much as a hundred times Carmel's small population. It is certainly a record of which Carmel can be justifiably proud, and one which would well merit every attention of the City of Carmel could properly give it, both now and in the future.

Today, Carmel may be about to contribute an important playwright of the future, for a boy who grew up here, became an Eagle scout here in the mid-fifties, won acting and playwrighting awards in college, not long ago gained the favorable attention of a New York Times drama critic, for his play "The Watch-Pit," premiered at the Brooklyn Academy of Music. The emerging playwright's name is Kit Jones, and his father is Carmel architect Robert Jones.

Said the New York Timesman about young Jones and his play: "The three-act work...affords the real theater buff an excellent opportunity to see a bright new playwright in the process of creativity. Mr. Jones tells a story that jumps in and out of the Book of Genesis but comes from a Bible-type history of his own devising...Nothing less than the story of the human race, done as sober caricature, now serious, now humorous, sometimes wordy, often rewarding, is the stuff of 'Watch-Pit'..."

If you want to see a new day in creative theater in Carmel, let your city fathers know, for they are the ones who could easily take the modest steps needed, to bring that new day.

'Symphony Week' spotlights our own symphony orchestra

By Irving W. Greenberg

With Sept. 20-26 proclaimed "Symphony Week," we felt it appropriate to highlight the various elements that constitute the Monterey County Symphony—its conductor, its orchestra personnel, its programs and its soloists for the 1970-71 season.

ITS CONDUCTOR

Maestro Haymo Taeuber, conductor and music director of the Monterey County Symphony Orchestra and the Monterey Peninsula Choral Society, was born in Graz, Austria, and began his early studies in violin and piano at the Graz Conservatory.

He next studied composition and counterpoint at the Vienna Academy of Music, later followed by master classes in conducting under Felix von Weingartner in Basel, Switzerland.

He began his career as an opera conductor in the Opera houses of Graz, Vienna and Breslau, at which he worked for 14 years.

After the war, he was appointed conductor of the Vienna Boys' Choir, a male chorus of the Vienna State Opera and the Vienna Philharmonic Orchestra. During the four years that he was in charge, he helped to establish a world-wide reputation of this group.

At the same time he was also guest conductor of such orchestras as the London Philharmonic, and the Orchestra of Belgrade, Zagreb, Graz, and the Vienna Symphony.

Following this period, he was appointed music director of the Turkish State Philharmonic Orchestra in Ankara, Turkey. His next assignment was an invitation by the Shah of Iran to build a professional symphony orchestra in Teheran, Iran.

In 1963, he was appointed music director of the Calgary Philharmonic in Canada, while on a guest-conducting tour, with the object of developing an orchestra of professional status from this community group.

In 1968, he came to the United States as conductor and music director of the Monterey County Symphony Orchestra where he is now getting ready for his third season.

ITS PERSONNEL

In an interview, Maestro Taeuber clarified a number of questions relating to the orchestra.

As to the composition of the personnel, "The present orchestra consists of approximately one-half professional musicians of permanent status, the other half being either of semi-professional or of amateur origin. In addition, the non-professional musicians are not always identical, being drawn as they are available from various community groups.

"When I talk about 'professional musicians' I do not refer to artists of such stature as are demanded in set standards by such orchestras as the New York Philharmonic, Philadelphia Orchestra, Boston Symphony Orchestra, or the Cleveland Orchestra. When a concert-goer enters the auditoriums either in Monterey, Carmel or Salinas for a concert of this orchestra, he must forget all comparisons with such orchestras, but must judge the organization on its performance competence solely.

"Whenever there is a question of interpretation of any work to be performed, there is a free discussion between the conductor and the various members of the orchestra in the rehearsals preceding the performances.

"I wish to state my appreciation to the members of the orchestra for their devotion to the cause of music, sometimes at a great hardship, both physically and financially, and the wonderful cooperation with me in attempting to bring out fully the various nuances and tonal coloration of the works to be performed. No personality problems have ever existed, and it is hoped that none will arise in the future."

When I asked Maestro Taeuber on what basis he chooses the various works to be programmed for the coming season he answered:

"This is determined, naturally first on the competence of the orchestra to perform the particular work in question; secondly, it depends on the sophistication of the audience—a factor that can be very misleading if not gauged correctly. Thirdly, sometimes I program large and complex works, such as for example, last season, we did the Bruckner Seventh Symphony and Beethoven Ninth Symphony.

"This was done merely as a challenge to the musical ability and interpretation of this orchestra in order to determine how well they are equal to such a difficult task. In retrospect, it seems to me that they did not do too badly with these scores. However, in order to bring out the relative capabilities of each section of the orchestra, the forthcoming season will not be as ambitious as last season, but will concentrate largely on the standard repertoire.

"The only exception in programming is the last concert consisting of the Mendelssohn Oratorio, Elijah. This will be a good test for both the orchestra and the Choral Society.

"With respect to the soloists to be employed in the various programs scheduled, they are chosen from those with background and affinity for the score in question. Also, another factor in their choice is on the basis of their previous experience in concertizing appearances with other orchestras and chamber music groups."

ITS PROGRAMS

The orchestra will perform three sets of six concerts each—one at Monterey, one at Carmel, and one at Salinas, with exception of the last concert of the Mendelssohn Elijah, which will only be performed in Monterey and Carmel.

ITS SOLOISTS

Claudine Carlson, mezzo-

soprano, will be the soloist in Mahler's Songs of the Death of Infants (Kindertotenlieder) in the concerts of October 4-6. Paris-born Claudine Carlson studied in Europe, Latin America and Los Angeles.

She has appeared with a number of California orchestras as well as with many orchestras in the U.S., Europe, the Near East and the Far East, as well as with the N.Y.C. Opera and the Washington, D.C. Opera. She has recorded for Angel and Columbia.

The second concert, Nov. 22-24, will feature the first desk-players of the Monterey County Symphony Orchestra in W.A. Mozart's Symphonie Concertante for Winds. These soloists are Barry Fader, oboe; Nash Getchell, clarinet; Ann Hubbard, bassoon; and Dale Harrison, French horn.

The third concert will feature Mari Tsumura as violin soloist in the Paganini Concerto No. 1 in D major, Op. 6.

Born in Osaka, Japan, she came to the U.S. in 1965, and, after winning an award, began appearing with the National Symphony Orchestra of Washington, D.C. as a concert artist. She also has appeared with the Calgary Philharmonic of Canada under Haymo Taeuber.

Natasha Gutman, the young Soviet cellist, will perform in the Robert Schumann Cello Concerto in the concerts of Jan. 17-19. She was born in Moscow, is 27 years old, and has won numerous competitions in Vienna, Moscow, Prague and Munich. She has concertized extensively in the Soviet Union, Czechoslovakia, Roumania, Yugoslavia and Germany.

Leonard Pennario, who will perform the Liszt Piano Concerto No. 2 in A and the Richard Strauss Burleske for Piano and Orchestra in the concerts of Mar. 28-30, has achieved a list of triumphs envied by his contemporaries and equaled only by a few elder statesmen of the concert world. As a soloist with the greatest orchestras both here in the U.S. and in Europe, he is established as an international celebrity in the grand tradition.

In the concerts of May 16 and 17, the Monterey Peninsula Choral Society will assist the orchestra in the performance of Mendelssohn's oratorio, Elijah.

Choral Society members represent the entire community. It includes businessmen, doctors, teachers, artists, students, military and sales personnel. Since 1965 when this group was formed as a non-profit organization, it has undertaken extremely ambitious programming including Bach's Christmas Oratorio, Brahms' Requiem, Handel's Messiah and Verdi's Requiem.

In conclusion, and as a result of this interview with Maestro Taeuber, I hope that I have conveyed the effort and dedication on the part of everybody involved in order to bring this type of musical experience.

Expert tells Junior League meeting:

Community organization volunteers create, learn, lead and follow

By MELLON HUNTON

"The more you and I disagree, the more enriched is each of our experiences."

The speaker was Dr. Eva Schindler-Rainman, distinguished behavioral scientist, leading a day-long miniature conference sponsored by the Junior League of the Monterey Peninsula last Wednesday at the Mark Thomas Inn.

Dr. Rainman's remarks stimulated more than 200 volunteers and representatives of 44 Peninsula organizations into animated discussion and dialogue.

"The generation gap is only one of many polarizations that exist today," Dr. Rainman declared. "We feel more comfortable with people who agree with us, with people of our own color, background and education. We don't have to try so hard because there is less challenge to our thinking."

Expanding the point, the brilliant educator explained that where there is dialogue, there is growth. "Just because you were born later than I, or I was born later than you, is no reason for us to be at extremes of thought," she continues.

It is because of one of these polarizations, frequently called "the generation gap," that teenagers seek "group homes" since they seem to get more support from each other than from adults. With understanding and communication between young and old, rich and poor, black and white this need not happen. "We must learn to accept each other and through this, polarization will cease to exist," she said.

Dr. Schindler-Rainman told of a Teenage and Adult Workshop she conducted at the Sheraton Beach Inn at Huntington Beach for three days last month, Aug. 23-26. The teenagers and adults were chosen at random and were asked "to sit anywhere."

The first day all the young people sat together with the adults in a similar grouping across the room. The leader asked each group to list on paper objections each age group had to the other.

Several objections were similar in each age bracket with "not being willing to listen" leading the list on each. "This clearly asserts," Dr. Rainman remarked, "that there is practically no dialogue between parents and children and how enriched each group would be if there were!"

All manner of problems were frankly discussed. Pot, stronger drugs, alcohol, sex, agencies dealing with youth.

The speaker stated that our communities are going through a reverse transmission of values and culture as these guidelines are now coming from the young people to the adults since their numbers so far exceed their elders. "The time is past when the parents set the value pattern; it is the children who are setting a new culture. Many students are now on Boards of Education and are helping to make education relevant. We must accept this and listen or our polarization will increase."

In the afternoon session, devoted to discussion with members of the Junior League of the Monterey Peninsula, Dr. Rainman expanded on the multiple role of women and an increased need for voluntarism.

"Voluntarism is here to stay for these reasons: to strengthen our society, to maintain the humanism in human services, to continue openness, communication, support and sharing between consumer and service, between hospital and patient. Volunteers are here to stay because we care about what happens in this land and thus extend opportunities in order that others may continue to live."

The leader addressed herself to questions arising from each discussion group at the tables throughout the room and offered these qualities which volunteers need. As a volunteer... "we give of our ideas and ideals because we need to be creative, to learn, to grow, to be recognized, be successful, make decisions, solve problems, be heard, have fun, meet new people, to lead or to follow..."

Among the community organizations represented at the workshop were American Field Services, League of Women Voters, Bach Festival, American Cancer Society, American Red Cross, Arts Coordinating Council, American Association of University Women, League for the Handicapped, Girl Scouts of America, Camp Fire Girls, Heart Association, Camp Amigos, Reality House, and Suicide Prevention Bureau.

dress, long hair ("some of the long hairs were not anarchists and some of the short haired, clean shaven were not All American Boys"), music, politics and anything that anyone wanted to discuss.

By the end of the second day's session, the gap was beginning to narrow and there was a sprinkling of teenagers sitting among the adults and by the end of the workshop, "they were all mixed up and we ended by dancing together!"

Dr. Schindler-Rainman received her masters and her doctorate in social work at the University of Southern California and is now on the faculty of the UCLA Education Extension Division. She is one of three women to be elected to the National Training Laboratories, a professional behavioral scientists' organization. She is, at present, consultant to the Women's Job Corps, the Los Angeles Youth Authority, the Office of the Mayor of Los Angeles, the Los Angeles Youth Opportunities Board, Sears Roebuck and Company and is administrative and leadership trainer for several private and public

The fabulous career of Byington

By JUDITH A. EISNER

Imagine coming to the Monterey Peninsula half a century ago as a young man to live and work and play; imagine the untouched beauties of cypress grove, pine forest and oak-shaded hillsides; imagine the carefree years after the first World War in Carmel—a happy life of baseball games, polo matches, theatrical productions, all-night parties. Imagine being one of the first men to develop this area—and develop it with a conscience and an eye to preservation—and you are recreating some of the memories of Byington Ford.

Born in 1891 in Downieville, Sierra County, California, By's parents moved to San Francisco when he was two years old. "so I don't really remember much before San Francisco," he says. He attended the San Francisco public schools and recalls with some pleasure that he was last in his high school graduating class and considered an academic washout.

He also remembers, with equal pleasure, the Great Quake of 1906, for he was 15 years old. The Ford family lived on Haight Street and By recalls: "I got on my bicycle and rode downtown to watch it. Oh, I had a grand time. I watched them dynamiting the buildings. My folks were getting ready to evacuate and thought I was lost."

By was only "lost" in those days in the academic sense. He enrolled at Santa Clara College, where he "played a little rugby and baseball—there was no football in America then," and managed to graduate at the head of his class—magna cum laude. "I was a late-bloomer," he smiles.

His father was a lawyer and By intended to follow him into law practice. He had been accepted to Harvard, but entered the "University" (U.C. Berkeley) instead, because it was felt he was a little young.

"I got another B.A. in 1912 and an M.A. in 1913, and I really think I went the extra year to get my M.A. so I could play baseball," he admits. In the interim, however, he gave up the idea of practicing law and went into real estate instead.

He did his internship in subdivision and real estate up in San Francisco with Ingleside Terraces, a major subdivision firm of the pre-World War I era.

Somehow, By Ford, whose interests were numerous and varied, found himself out of the real estate business and in the fledgling field of producing animated cartoons—long before Walt Disney ever entered the picture. That prospering endeavor ended, however, with the entry of the U.S. into World War I.

JOINS GUARD

By enlisted in the California National Guard in 1917, went to Officers Training Camp at the Presidio of San Francisco where he was commissioned, and thence "over there" to France. As a member of the 26th "Yankee" Division, Ford saw action in such memorable places as Chateau Thierry and the Meuse Argonne and was discharged, in 1919, as a Captain.

"I had been gassed during the war and when I was discharged from Letterman General Hospital I came down here to get out in the open and breathe some fresh air. I never left."

He took a temporary job—that was to last 12 years—with Del Monte Properties and was suddenly back in the real estate business. His job included riding horseback through the undeveloped parts of Del Monte Forest and he eventually came to head their Real Estate Department.

Those were the carefree years of playing polo in Pebble Beach ("When they needed an eighth, they'd put me on some hard-mouthed old horse.") and of paper-chases through Del Monte Forest. A paper-chase, he explains, is when the "hare" drops torn pieces of paper from horseback to mark his trail and is pursued by the "hunters" as in a real hunt. "We ran those paper-chases from Del Monte Lodge to Cypress Point," he remembers, and also remembers that he has "a polo cup or two" tucked away.

Those were also the good old days of the Abalone League, the famed baseball league of old Carmel, that began back in 1925 and included such players as Lee Gottfried, architect, Fred Godwin, C. K. Van Riper, playwright, Eddie Burns, a pro ex-catcher from the Phillies, Harrison Godwin and Glenn Leidig.

Notable on every team in the League were two women players, one playing first base and the other a nebulous position known as "mid-field."

"It was just a fun thing among neighbors," says By, but it made headlines in those days.

Says a write-up in a local newspaper: "The Shamrocks (By's team) took to the field wearing the most godawful shirts ever seen at the Abalone Park and that is saying a lot. After the shouting was over and the Shamrocks won, By Ford said complacently, 'I knew those shirts would scare them.'"

One of the cultural contributions of the Abalone League was the "Abalone Song," an ongoing phenomenon penned by such notables as George Sterling, Jack London and Sinclair Lewis:

Oh some drink rain
and some champagne,
And whiskey by the pony.
But I will try a dash of rye
And a hunk of abalone.

wrote George Sterling.

The Abalone League players sang the Abalone Song while pounding succulent Monterey Bay abalone at gala Carmel beach parties of yesteryear. It is, says By Ford, Carmel's contribution to American folk music.

Back at its inception, the Abalone League played ball on what is now Carmel Point. They eventually bought some land in Carmel Woods and to pay for those lots, turned to theatrical endeavors.

ON STAGE

At the old Arts and Crafts Theater, where the Golden Bough now stands, By Ford and his Abalone Players staged some of Carmel's most memorable theatrical firsts. In 1927 they produced "The Bad Man," in 1928 "The Copperhead," in which leading man By Ford was compared to Lionel Barrymore, the "Abalone Follies" to raise money to re-roof Carmel Mission, and "Is Zat So."

What began as baseball-oriented whimsy turned into genuine theatrical involvement and in 1934 By directed Martin Flavin's "Sunday" at the Forest Theater and later John Patrick's "Glory Lane." Both playwrights went on to become Pulitzer Prize winners. He then co-authored a musical, "Where There's A Will" with Dick Masten, long known in Carmel theatrical circles. In all, he acted in, directed or wrote more than 45 plays in Carmel.

Those heydays of Carmel theatre, By recalls, were days when Carmel was a small town, when everyone knew everyone else and when a director would stop a girl on the street and say, "Hey, you look right for this part. How about coming down and reading it for me?" That was type casting! That, as a matter of fact, was how By got into his first Carmel show, "Prunella." "Kit Cook, the director, stopped me on the street and that did it," he remembers.

"Where There's A Will" was produced in 1939, which was the year By began development of the Mission Tract. He was on his own now, operating Carmel Realty Company and the days when Ocean Avenue was unpaved were long gone.

"I was the first person to put in underground utilities in Carmel," he says, "and I had to fight just about everybody to get it done. I learned about underground back in 1913 with Ingleside Terraces in San Francisco."

He also developed Carmel Woods, "the first time the City of Carmel entered into a commercial enterprise," he chuckles.

"We promised to pave the streets in the Woods for the city. And we got Jo Mora, the sculptor, to execute the statue of Father Serra that still stands there, and George Sterling to write a poem dedicating the Woods to the memory of Serra. Then we had a real ceremony, unveiling the statue and reading the poem and everybody was delighted."

By Ford isn't at all surprised at the growth of the area. "I knew back then that every year more and more people were going to find this place and come here to live...and we'd have to take care of traffic and parking and all that. Way back in the 'Dark Ages' I had a big fight in Carmel about parking. At that time, they parked on the diagonal, on both sides of Ocean Avenue—four rows of parked cars. I surveyed the number of parking spaces on the streets and said there wasn't enough—but they didn't listen to me. 'We don't want anyone else to come to Carmel,' they said."

"I fought for four lanes of traffic in the Valley—but not a four-lane highway. I wanted something like the Prunedale cutoff—two winding country roads, but one-way roads. I wanted the existing Carmel Valley Road to be one way and another road to be built farther south, following the river...It can still be done, but now they'd have to condemn a lot more property."

By's association with Carmel Valley goes back to the 40s when his brother, Tirey, founded Del Monte Aviation. By learned to fly and got his first pilot's license in 1941. He and Tirey envisioned the coming of the airplane, an era when every man was able to own his own plane, and purchased from Frank Porter 600 acres of Carmel Valley real estate.

BUILT AIRPORT

"We were a little ahead of our time but didn't know it," he says. "I used to get up every morning and put up a wind sock. I checked it every day for a month; then, I laid out the runway."

They planted the landing strip with African Kykuyu grass, and By, who should know, says they planted 2400 feet as the original length. "Then, when after a time the grass got blotchy, my brother oiled 1800 feet of runway. That's where the controversy started. But it was planned as a 2400-foot runway."

They called in an architect who drew up the original plans for Airway Ranch, the subdivision-that-never-was, for along came World War II.

"I enlisted again," says By, who eventually ended up as Provost Marshall at Wright Field and a Lt. Colonel.

In the meantime, the "airport" in Carmel Valley was being used by the army to train pilots and during the war the one and only hangar-house, designed for plane-owning families, was burned.

After the war, still harboring visions of Airway Ranch, By built what is now part of Carmel Valley Village—originally "Airway Village," containing the Airway Market (now the General Store), a barber shop he named the "Clip Joint," and the Grapevine Liquor Store. These buildings, without arcade, were conceived as a Spanish town and artist Bruce Ariss painted murals on each store. "Tourists would drive by, see those colored murals, slam on their brakes and back up!" he says. All that is changed now. By owned the Grapevine with Ed Haber for a long time, and built and owned Canary Cottages as well.

By admits that the valley is getting crowded and blames zoning regulations and personal greed for it.

"When I laid out tracts we didn't have any zoning regulations. I'd go over the land and where there was a building site, I'd sink a stake. It was all natural contour subdivision and the deed restrictions were against future subdivision."

"We didn't go by lot size; some homesites were a half acre and some were eight acres or more. We selected sites, not one acre or three acre parcels."

"One acre zoning is not the answer. I believe in cluster developments now. People can't keep up an acre or two in green lawn and gardens the way cluster developments can. They preserve large stretches of greenbelt. I remember when the property owners fought against the golf courses. Now they admit they preserve the greenery.

"I suggested once long ago that in Carmel Valley Village they have 'Green Zones.' They were to be 10-acre minimum building sites with a minimum of buildings and a limited number of families—ideal for a small research laboratory, any clean-air business. That would have kept chunks of 10 and 20 acres intact. Instead, it's being cut up into one acre lots."

"I sold 22 acres behind the airport with a no-subdivision clause. Now there are at least five houses bulldozed out of those hillsides because of the new zoning regulations which superceded my deed restrictions."

"I wish," he muses, "that more developers worked the way Del Monte Properties worked, or the way I did..." By Ford will be 80 years old on November 1. He plays nine holes of golf every morning at the Carmel Valley Golf & Country Club, where he now lives with his wife, Ruth. He has three daughters living on the Peninsula, 11 grandchildren and a great-grandchild "on the way." He admits he likes to reminisce, even as he likes to look forward.

"My experiences have been very pleasant here...The people I fought with are my friends."

The fabulous career of Byington

WORLD WAR I: Capt. Ford served with the 26th "Yankee" Division and was discharged in 1919 after seeing action at Chateau Thierry and the Argonne.

By JUDITH A. EISNER

Imagine coming to the Monterey Peninsula half a century ago as a young man to live and work and play; imagine the untouched beauties of cypress grove, pine forest and oak-shaded hillsides; imagine the carefree years after the first World War in Carmel—a happy life of baseball games, polo matches, theatrical productions, all-night parties. Imagine being one of the first men to develop this area—and develop it with a conscience and an eye to preservation—and you are recreating some of the memories of Byington Ford.

Born in 1891 in Downieville, Sierra County, California, By's parents moved to San Francisco when he was two years old. "so I don't really remember much before San Francisco," he says. He attended the San Francisco public schools and recalls with some pleasure that he was last in his high school graduating class and considered an academic washout.

He also remembers, with equal pleasure, the Great Quake of 1906, for he was 15 years old. The Ford family lived on Haight Street and By recalls: "I got on my bicycle and rode downtown to watch it. Oh, I had a grand time. I watched them dynamiting the buildings. My folks were getting ready to evacuate and thought I was lost."

By was only "lost" in those days in the academic sense. He enrolled at Santa Clara College, where he "played a little rugby and baseball—there was no football in America then," and managed to graduate at the head of his class—magna cum laude. "I was a late-bloomer," he smiles.

His father was a lawyer and By intended to follow him into law practice. He had been accepted to Harvard, but entered the "University," (U.C. Berkeley) instead, because it was felt he was a little young.

"I got another B.A. in 1912 and an M.A. in 1913, and I really think I went the extra year to get my M.A. so I could play baseball," he admits. In the interim, however, he gave up the idea of practicing law and went into real estate instead.

Expect sellout for Big Sur Folk Festival

A partial list of performers including Joan Baez, John Hartford, Chris Kristoferson, John Phillips and the Beach Boys for the Big Sur Folk Festival was announced in Carmel Tuesday by Nancy Carlen, festival producer.

A sell-out for the Oct. 3 event at the Monterey County Fairgrounds is expected.

A few tickets remain on sale on the Monterey Peninsula, although quite a few are still available at San Francisco outlets, said Miss Carlen.

She stressed that only ticket holders will be allowed into the 6800-seat Pattee Arena.

"We don't anticipate having any tickets at the gate," she said.

COMMUNITY FAIR AT DEL MONTE

Each year Del Monte Shopping Center invites all of the clubs and organizations in Monterey County to participate in a Community Fair event. The clubs and organizations use this opportunity to raise funds for special projects. This is also their opportunity to tell others who they are and their contribution to the community.

This year more than 40 participants will exhibit at the Community Fair Friday thru Sunday.

Many of the clubs have spent a lot of time fabricating unusual booths.

Colorful Carmel Mission Fiesta to be held Sunday

The annual Carmel Mission Fiesta will be held Sunday, with Mexican costumes, pinatas and mariachi bands the order of the day. Festivities will highlight continuous entertainment in the tradition of Old Mexico with music, dancing, games and a gala display of spirit found only at fiesta.

The fiesta will begin with the celebration of the 11 o'clock mass at the Mission. It commemorates the feast day of San Carlos de Borromeo, patron saint of the basilica and recalls the early days of Father Junipero Serra and his founding of the Mission.

Co-chairmen Phil Coniglio and John Calcagno have worked diligently to present an unusual event in the Bi-Centennial spirit. John Wecker, entertainment chairman, has scheduled the music of Manuel Camps and his well known group; the flamenco music of the talented virtuosos, Mariano Cordoba and Nino de Lavante and the colorful folk singing of Mark Evans.

A teen dance will be held in Crespi Hall with music by the Capri's. Tacos, burritos and the full course chicken barbecue will be available.

There are many prizes this year. Some lucky individuals will be glad they attended because the fiesta committee was fortunate in obtaining three original paintings by Danny Garcia.

Many of our local artists and craftsmen will have their works on display. This is something new and it is hoped it will continue to be part of this annual community event.

Cooking classes for men only

Pacific Gas and Electric Company plans a two-session gourmet cooking class for men only on Oct. 6 and Oct. 12 from 7:30 - 9:30 p.m. The class will be held at the Rancho Canada Golf Club on Carmel Valley Road about two miles east of Highway 1 in Carmel Valley.

At the first session, Walter Rodman of the California Beef Council will discuss various cuts of beef, guides to buying, what constitutes high quality, storage and choosing beef for barbecuing. PG&E Home Economist Gloria Pieretti will demonstrate cooking and barbecuing techniques.

Dan Mirassou of Mirassou Winery in San Jose will be featured at the second session. He will talk about wines and their selection. Recipes using wines in cooking and sauces and marinades will be shown. A question and answer period and tasting will follow each session.

The class is being presented free of charge, but seating is limited. Reservations may be made by calling Wayne McNown at PG&E in Monterey, 375-9811.

BY JUDITH EISNER

One of the most frightening things for a pet owner to contemplate is his pet being poisoned. It does happen—but it's reassuring to know that there aren't many sad, demented individuals who deliberately set out poison for the neighborhood animals.

Most cases of animal poisoning are attributable to the dog's curiosity and the owner's carelessness. Just as you must take precautions when there are young children about the house and garden, you have to be careful with pets. Puppies especially, seem to go through a phase when they'll eat—or attempt to eat—just about anything. Usually, nothing more serious ensues than an upset stomach, but sometimes they manage to swallow some pretty powerful stuff.

High on the list of pet-poisoners are household preparations such as drain cleaners (lye) and various pesticides including rat, ant, roach and gopher poisons. Puppies seem to find these poisons irresistible, although many times their intended victims do not.

One of the problems of suspected poisoning is that symptoms are the same for many other illness. They include indication of severe abdominal pain, panting, trembling, nausea, vomiting and possible collapse. Only in instances where you know the animal has eaten a specific poison—by finding the container, for example—can you administer the antidote for that particular poison.

Generally, poisonous substances have antidotes printed on the label. If you have the antidote in the house, you first make the dog vomit, then administer the antidote as directed, then rush him to the vet.

If the information is not printed on the label, you may be able to obtain antidote information by a phone call to the County Hospital, a local vet or a neighborhood pharmacist. No one will object to helping you save your pet's life. But don't get stuck making endless phone calls; just one may be worth the time, however.

Making a dog vomit is a relatively simple thing, though not recommended treatment for rugs and furnishings. Two of the best things to do the job are doses of mustard water or peroxide. Mustard water is made by mixing a teaspoonful of powdered mustard with about a quarter of a glass of warm water; peroxide solution is ordinary drugstore 3 percent hydrogen peroxide mixed with equal amounts of water. If you're out of mustard and peroxide, warm soapy or salty water may work.

Once you've mixed the solution, you force it down his throat until he vomits. Don't expect cooperation. It's a messy, unpleasant job. The dog may already be in pain from the action of the poison and isn't going to be too keen on swallowing quantities of any of the above solutions.

Now is no time for lip-pouch methods or coaxing. Get the dog's mouth open, pour in a quantity of fluid, close his mouth immediately and hold his muzzle up to make him swallow. You'll know when you've gotten enough into him when he vomits.

One precaution: in your anxiety and haste, don't drown the poor dog! When we say "pour in a quantity" we mean a quarter of a glass or less at a time; then repeat. Don't try to get him to swallow eight ounces at one gulp.

The one exception to the vomiting rule is when you know the dog has ingested either a corrosive acid or an alkali such as drain cleaner. In these cases, regurgitating these substances does more damage to the mouth and throat as they come out. Rapid neutralization of the poison is the answer. For acids, administer baking soda solution or milk of magnesia. Get in as much as you can. For alkalis, give vinegar or lemon juice. Then follow the "antidote" with milk, olive oil or raw egg white—as much as you can get into him.

In all other types of poisoning, once the dog has vomited, give him the specific antidote if you have it and then follow it with as much milk as he will take to soothe his stomach. Treat him for shock and get to a vet—fast.

If you can't find out what the specific antidote for the poison is, you should have in your medicine chest something known as "universal antidote." Any pharmacist can make up this powder for you and it will keep for years. It contains: one part light magnesium oxide; one part kaolin; one part tannic acid and two parts activated charcoal.

After the dog has vomited, mix four heaping teaspoonsful of universal antidote with a glass of warm water, stir well and get as much as possible into the dog. This solution isn't the ultimate answer to poisoning cases, but it is supposed to work well: the charcoal and kaolin absorb poisons and keep them from entering the system; tannic acid reacts with alkalis and magnesium oxide reacts with the stomach fluids to help empty the stomach.

If you have nothing prepared for emergencies, get as much milk and raw egg whites as you can into him. Then rush to the vet.

Even if the dog hasn't really been poisoned, universal antidote, milk, olive oil or raw egg whites won't harm him and may soothe an upset stomach, so don't be afraid to use them. Whatever the case, be sure to consult your vet as quickly as possible for professional treatment.

In cases where the animal has collapsed or is semi-conscious when you find him, you won't be able to get anything into him. All you can do is cover him and try to get to a vet immediately.

It's always best to be prepared for medical emergencies, with pets as with children. Many of the household remedies you regularly stock are useful in aiding pets; many can be fatal if used incorrectly or at all.

Next week, we'll discuss what you should have in a medicine chest for dogs.

THE PHONE BOOTH

Iron + Tin + Zinc = Beige. If you have a beige telephone, that's the formula used to make it that color. And these aren't all the elements it contains. Your standard phone has 42 of the 104 known chemical elements, ranging from precious metals like gold, silver and platinum (in tiny amounts for electrical contacts) to more plentiful copper, iron and lead.

The elements are in chemical compounds—such as the hydrogen and carbon that form the plastic housing of your phone. That's the formula for your basic black set. And making telephones other colors is not achieved by painting them. Adding mercury to the compound makes them red. Cadmium makes them yellow, and chromium, green.

United Nations Day is October 24. President Nixon has asked all Americans to observe the U.N.'s 25th anniversary this year as a reminder that the U.N. is the chief rallying point for those who seek world peace and world economic and social stability.

The Question Box

Q Are the "toll free" numbers I've seen advertised really free?

A Yes. Many businesses advertise special numbers which permit their customers on the Monterey Peninsula to call them free of charge. You never have to mention that the call is collect or wait for them to accept charges. These companies welcome your call and automatically pick up the tab.

Carmelites ignore lettuce boycott thus far

Although Cesar Chavez's call for a boycott of non-union picked lettuce hasn't had much effect on local consumer spending habits yet, it has certainly made wary a number of Carmel grocery owners.

Two questions were asked Tuesday of seven Carmel grocers: 1) are customers requesting lettuce picked by Chavez's United Farm Workers Organizing Committee (UFWOC)? 2) are markets intending to supply UFWOC leaf?

All answers were negative.

Five markets—Nielsen, Morton, Kip's, Mediterranean and Safeway—said simply that they had received no customer requests for the union's produce and that there were no immediate plans to alter existing supply channels in order to obtain UFWOC lettuce.

Owners of Carmel Drive-In Market on Dolores and Eighth and Thrift Food Store, San Carlos and Fifth, would not comment.

Apparently no union-picked lettuce is available in Carmel at the moment, although several of the owners and managers contacted were not sure of their produce's status.

Most lettuce in the smaller stores now is distributed by Jim Turner Produce Company of Watsonville and R & M Produce Company of Salinas.

An R & M spokesman said all the company's lettuce is non-union picked while Turner, in Carmel Tuesday, was not sure of his lettuce's origin.

Turner said he picked up his lettuce from a central vacuum cooling plant which he believed is supplied by "Teamster Union" field workers.

Teamster Union, which has gained jurisdiction over packing and distributing workers in the long-standing Salinas Valley crops dispute, recently relinquished jurisdiction over field workers to the UFWOC.

There were no reports by either distributors or retailers of any disruption in the supply of lettuce, although Vincent Bruno of Kip's Food Center said sales for the leaf have been slow in recent weeks, as reported to him by buyers.

Bruno speculated that the slump is the result of "the recent trouble"—a reference to the grower-union struggle.

Three of the men contacted said they doubted there would be much local support for the boycott.

Mervin Sutton, owner-manager of Nielsen Brothers Market Inc., said that "nobody cares" about the boycott.

Ronald Roberts, Morton Manager, felt that the boycott will have more effect in the eastern United States because, he said, that it is where much of the Salinas produce is shipped.

Roberts compared the boycott to the recent UFWOC grape strike which he said generated little local support.

"A couple of hippies might say something about it but that's all," he said.

Bill Spann, Carmel Center Safeway manager, said "consumers haven't felt (the boycott) yet" and doubted they will.

"These customers will ignore most any boycott," he said.

Spann felt the store "shouldn't try to censor what the customer can buy."

He didn't know if Safeway had taken any official stance yet on the boycott, nor was he able to predict whether or not the chain will be supplying union-picked lettuce.

Aluminum re-cycling campaign continues

A reminder that the aluminum re-cycling campaign is still going on was issued Tuesday by the youth group of Ventana Chapter, Sierra Club.

Two centrally located collection bins are open daily on the MPC campus and at Carmel High School.

Eight hundred pounds of aluminum, which comes to 18,400 beer and pop cans, were collected by the youth group in its semi-annual roundup Saturday, Sept. 12.

"That was great, but we hope conservationists will keep right on saving aluminum cans, TV dinner trays and foil," said Jack Holmgren, Carmel High School campaign coordinator.

The latest pickup, climaxing a campaign spread over several months, was centered at four Monterey Peninsula high schools and involved 21 young Sierra Club members. The teenagers added $80 to a fund which will be used to make a 16mm film on coastal conservation.

Wire collection bins are located on the MPC campus, near the parking lot across from the old Student Union, and in the island on the Carmel High parking lot.

"These bins are for people who don't want the cans to pile up in their closets, garages or carports," a spokesman for the youth group said.

Our Churches

The Reverend Howard E. Bull, former minister of the Pioneer Congregational Church in Santa Rosa, will be formally installed as the Minister for the Community Church of the Monterey Peninsula on Sunday, Sept. 27, at 3:30 p.m. Rev. Bull came to the Carmel church in mid-July.

Participants in the Installation Service will include several local and out-of-town clergy and laymen. Dr. Robert G. Morris will come from Toledo, Ohio to deliver the Installation Address entitled "The Art of Laymanship."

Dr. Morris, an attorney with the firm of Everett, Brown and Morris in Toledo, is a member of the Ohio State Bar Association Committee on Judicial Administration and Legal Reform. He earned the degree of Doctor of Jurisprudence from the University of Toledo where he now lectures in Political Science. He is a member of the Executive Committee of the National Association of Congregational Churches of which Rev. Bull is also a member. He also serves on the Board of Directors of the Congregational Foundation for Theological Studies.

Others taking part in the Installation service are The Rev. David Hill of All Saints' Episcopal Church; the Rev. Edwin R. Howard, former Interim Minister of the Community Church; Mr. James B. Pruitt, local architect and President of the Community Church's Board of Governors; the Rev. Walter A. Boring from the Soquel Congregational Church; Dr. Ronald J. Menmuir, first Interim Minister of the Community Church and Instructor of Philosophy and World ational Church in San Jose. Following the Installation, there will be a reception at the church for participants, church members and guests.

ALL SAINTS

Father David Hill will be a clergy delegate to the Episcopal Church's general convention Oct. 11-22 in Houston.

Father Hill says the meeting will deal with many critical issues.

"There is wide-spread unspoken mistrust of the national hierarchy—not just about controversial decisions, but because of methods used which are political and bureaucratic and dehumanizing.

"Churchmen expect much of their leaders and that leadership crisis reflects American society and its establishment forms."

Father Hill promises to share more information on the convention at neighborhood meetings with parishioners.

ST. PHILLIP'S

"Headed for Heaven" is the title of the Rev. George W. Schardt's sermon Sunday at St. Phillip's Lutheran Church of Carmel.

The Rev. Schardt will deal with the questions: Where do I come from? Why am I here? Where am I going?

"Some are indifferent and say, 'Let's eat, drink and be merry for tomorrow we'll die,' says the Rev. Schardt. 'Others care but go to wrong sources for their answers—man-made religions such as astrology—and they become frustrated in the end.

"The Christian alone finds his answer in the true source—God's inspired word."

The Rev. Schardt says the answers to the stated questions are: God created me in his image. I am here to glorify God in life. I am headed for heaven.

WAYFARER

"It's a Happy Day" is the title of Dr. Herbert W. Neale's sermon Sunday at the Church of the Wayfarer, United Methodist Church.

ALVINA GERDT

Alvina K. Gerdt, who resided with her husband, Edward F. Gerdt, on Santa Fe between Second and Third, died Sunday in a local hospital following a lengthy illness. She was a 14-year resident of Carmel.

Services were held Tuesday at Paul Mortuary in Pacific Grove with Dr. Herbert Neale from the Church of the Wayfarer in Carmel officiating.

Mrs. Gerdt was born in 1899 in Indianapolis, Ind., where she was a member of Prospect Lodge, Chapter 452, Order of Eastern Star, for 50 years. She was a lifetime United Church of Christ member.

OBITUARIES

In addition to her husband, she is survived by a sister, Mrs. Esther Bleistein of Indianapolis and two brothers, Elmer J. Windhorst of Carmel and Lawrence Windhorst of Milwaukee, Wis.

LILLIAN DOWNEY

Lillian Anderson Downey, of Fourth and Perry Newberry, died of a heart attack Saturday. She was a resident of Carmel for 30 years.

Mrs. Downey was the widow of the late James J. Downey, who died Oct. 9, 1962.

She was born Nov. 15, 1893, daughter of August J. Anderson, who came to the United States from Sweden, and Josephine Holm, a native of Minnesota.

Mrs. Downey was an active member of All Saints Episcopal Church, Alpha Lambda chapter of Delta Kappa Gamma, La Collecta, National Federation of Republican Womens Clubs, Carmel Womens Club and the Carmel Foundation.

She is survived by a sister, Mrs. Arthur J. Oberg, of San Diego, and a nephew, Arthur J. Oberg, of Minneapolis, Minn.

Funeral services were held Tuesday at All Saints with the Rev. David S. Hill officiating. Burial will be at the Lindstrom Cemetery in Lindstrom, Minn.

Rare tapestries to be shown reproductions shown at the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art, 559 Pacific St., Monterey, Oct. 1 through 26.

This achievement was coordinated by Mrs. Carlson

Mrs. Jehanne Salinger-Carlson of Carmel, past president of the local Alliance Francaise, has arranged on behalf of the Alliance to have a rare collection of tapestry through the cultural services of the French Embassy in Washington, D.C.

The exhibit comprises nine reproductions of the greatest tapestries from the 15th and 16th centuries by the noted

Swiss artist, Jean-Pierre Guillermet.

Rene Huyghes, former director of the Paris Louvre Museum, told Mrs. Carlson, "I have seen Guillermet's painted reproductions of famous French tapestries and consider them to achieve an effect infinitely superior to any others. Through their fidelity, appropriate size and chromatic sensibility, they are a rare treat to view."

Guillermet also lived in Costa Rica where he originated copies of some of the finest original pre-Columbian ceramics.

Carmel's Alliance Francaise is sponsoring a reception to honor the showing at the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art the evening of Oct. 9. Members of the Alliance, plus art gallery directors, are invited.

Mrs. Theodore Bradley of Carmel, president of this year's board of directors, is co-chairman with Mrs. Sean Flavin for the reception. Members of their committee who will prepare and serve the refreshments are Mmes. Malu Jacobs, Giselle Cadle, Nicole Longfellow and Phyllis Jervey.

National tenants eyed for Plaza

Cost analysis in underway for the Carmel Plaza extension in order to prepare rent estimates for potential lessees, Del Monte Properties, leasing agent for the project, announced Monday.

The Properties is seeking "several strong national chain stores as anchor tenants" as well as "local tenants with good merchandising ability" to occupy the premises, said Jim Glaser, the Del Monte executive who closed the plaza deal.

"We want to maintain the village character of Carmel," Glaser explained in reference to the type of shops sought for the center.

Cost analysis got underway following approval last week by the Carmel Planning Commission of the plaza's design principle.

The commission approved unanimously the initial model and drawings presented by the project architect, Walter Burde, with the understanding that the commission reserves the right to review for all future stages of design.

Praise was given to the concept of small buildings composing the half-block unit and to plans for an underground parking area, according to Olaf Dahlstrand, a Carmel architect who chairs the commission.

Burde, also based in Carmel, clarified that the plaza would incorporate more surface textures and materials than the model-builder had indicated.

Burde thought the plans were "very well received."

"We were asking for approval of the design concept—which we received," he said.

The project now moves into the design development stage in conjunction with cost and engineering studies, said Burde.

The structural engineering will be handled by Howard G. Carter of Monterey, Burde announced.

The plaza, which will add approximately 30 shops to Carmel, will be located on the site of the present Carmel Plaza parking lot bounded by Junipero, Seventh and Mission.

The area is being developed by Douglas Glinden of Hillsborough.

BBQ BASH

One of the humorous highlights of the Carmel Business Association's annual barbecue, held last Thursday, was the anguish reflected in the face and posture of Henri Corbat, French-speaking Swiss jeweler, on listening to American-speaking Carmel Mayor Barney Laiolo leading the assemblage in singing French folk song "Alouette."

Some 116 CBA members attended the traditional fall event, held this year at Indian Village picnic grounds in Pebble Beach.

LOGIES PLAN JAPAN VISIT

Col. and Mrs. Marc J. Logie and Dr. Iona Logie, all of Carmel, are flying to Japan early in October for a month visit.

Col. Logie was at one time provost marshal of Tokyo during his long U.S. Army career.

His wife, Yoshiko, has her family in Tokyo. A graduate of the University of Oregon and Haverford College, Pa., she also expects to renew acquaintance with many former fellow students at Tokyo Christian University.

NEW CARMELITES

A boy and a girl joined the Carmel population last week. The boy, Brad Jarrett, was born Sept. 13 to Mr. and Mrs. Frank E. Delzer. Stephanie Erin was the daughter born Sept. 15 to Mr. and Mrs. Monty Feeles.

THIS IS PROGRESS?

That's what Harriet Meyer asked at the end of her vacation journey to San Jose last week by train. She had been forewarned that there would be no porters at that end so she carried her heavy suitcase up and down ramps and across the waiting room. Only to find there were no taxis at the station and no phone to call one nearer than a block away.

WEST TO FRESNO

Carmel artist Barbara West is going to Fresno on Sept. 27 to be one of the judges for the art exhibit at the Fresno District Fair, which is having its 75th Anniversary. There are four judges from different parts of California. One of the others is Don Bloom, famous for his unusual coastal sunset pictures and also an exhibitor at the Carmel Art Association. Mrs. West now specializes in portraits.

CYNTHIA VISITS

Mrs. Richard F. Taylor—Cynthia—formerly of Carmel, visited earlier this week from Reno with her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Brenden Seaborn of Carmel Valley. Prime object of the visit was to see her second grandchild, Jonathan Barrick Seaborn, born Sept. 14.

FEHRINGS RETURN

Mr. and Mrs. Ted Fehring, with Julie and Joanne, have just returned from a whirlwind tour of England and Europe, in time to send Julie off to her junior year at Stanford, and launch Joanne at Chico State—the last of the "five J's" who are the Fehring daughters.

Julie had completed six months at Stanford's newly acquired campus in England, the enormous and beautiful Cliveden estate in Berkshire County, when her parents and younger sister joined her.

With prior travel alone or with friends previous to the family's arrival, Julie was able to act as guide and advisor to the group. They toured both Britain and the continent by car, touching down in Belgium, Holland, Germany, Switzerland, Austria, Italy and France. It was a first European tour for Joanne and their parents.

Although Julie is a Spanish major, she was enthusiastic over her "saturation" courses in English drama, literature, law, history and like subjects. Some of the English coastline reminded her of Carmel, "but Big Sur is still first in beauty." Small-town English people, Julie said, are like Carmel people in their individualism and their respect for the rights and privacy of others.

PARTY PLANS

by Phyllis Jervey

As we approach the fifth anniversary of your reporter's "Party Plans," we have decided to select several of the best dishes created by Carmel's top amateur men and women gourmets. These have been featured at aristocratic patio parties or simple fireplace suppers. Each is superior in its own right, so we'll start forth with the recipes rather than preliminary chit chat.

We'll begin our survey of fine Peninsula food with Mr. Stuyvesant Fish's own unique method of preparing his famed home-raised wild boar. This was served to Princess Margaret and Lord Snowden at Mr. Fish's Rancho Palo Corona when the royal British couple visited our Peninsula in 1965.

Stuyvie's Imperial Wild Boar

Make a marinade of 3 parts burgundy wine, 1 part soy sauce, 1 part melted butter, ½ part fresh lemon juice and ¼ part honey. Throw in a few crumbled rosemary and bay leaves with salt and cracked pepper to taste.

Barbecue the spitted dressed boar over glowing oakwood coals into which laurel leaves and eucalyptus twigs have been scattered. Wild boar is inclined to be somewhat dry, so continuous basting with the wine marinade is necessary. The spitted suckling piglet boar is turned often, 30 minutes to the pound. The outside is a beautiful bronze and the inside juicy, slightly pinkish and fork tender. Major Grey's chutney and mustard chow-chow plus sourdough toasted garlic-buttered bread complemented this superb offering, truly fit for royalty. Artichokes, cooked by Mrs. Bruno Odello were especially enjoyed by Princess Margaret as everyone admired the lovely green artichoke fields sweeping into the Pacific. Fresh Carmel Valley fruits and Monterey Jack cheese with California's finest wines made this a patio party long to be remembered.

Luckily for Carmel hunters, pheasant may be "acquired" the year around at private shooting preserves. Dr. Dexter Whitcomb, well known local sportsman, keeps their ample freezer supplied with succulent game birds for gala, as well as family meals.

Whitcomb Pheasant Supreme

One 5 lb. dressed pheasant; salt, pepper, flour, butter; 1 can condensed cream of mushroom soup; 1 soup can filled with dry sauterne; ½ pint sour cream; wild rice; guava jelly.

Cut up dressed pheasant into serving pieces for four. Season and dust with flour. In large cast iron skillet, melt butter and lightly brown pieces. Pour off drippings. Combine soup, wine and sour cream. Pour this sauce over pheasant, cover with tight-fitting lid and simmer on top of stove over lowest flame until very tender but not falling apart. Serve on platter kept hot at the table on electric warmer. Decorate platter with watercress and mandarin orange sections.

Accompany with wild rice and fresh mushrooms plus currant or guava jelly and hot biscuits. California wines, well chilled, with pineapple sherbert plus macaroons and coffee laced with brandy create a marvelous meal.

xxx

What does a busy businesswoman serve for Sunday night suppers? Mrs. Donna Hofsas-Smith, owner of l'Entrepot, Carmel's most posh "bonded warehouse par excellence in French" but the very exclusive gift and food shop in the Pine Inn complex, gave us her specialties:

Tomato Shrimp Frost

One can consomme Madrilene; 6 cooked shrimp, shelled and deveined; ½ t. Worcestershire; ¾ cup tomato juice; ¼ t. salt; ½ cup rose wine; shrimp and lemon wedges for garnish.

Put consomme, shrimp and Worcestershire into blender. Cover and blend at high speed. Add juice, salt and wine. Pour into empty ice cube tray. Place in freezing compartment with controls set high. Stir several times while mixture is freezing. When almost firm, whip with a rotary beater. Spoon into sherbert glasses. Garnish with extra shrimp and lemon wedges. Serve chilled for 6.

Donna prepared this ahead of time keeping it cold until serving time. Tiny hot rolls filled with cheese, Smithfield ham spread or whatever acts as a foil with the delightful "Frost" (a suggestion from your reporter.)

With her usual expertise, Donna then brings forth a steaming casserole of Beef Stroganoff made from the best filet of beef and a lavish amount of fresh mushrooms. Serve this with sour cream and green noodles. A magic combination! Subtly seasoned, the cold very much so and the hot kept that way. This is Donna's formula.

The ABC of drug abuse:

What drugs are and what they do

The Carmel Pine Cone

SECTION II

Tuesday night, before a capacity audience in Carmel High School's Brey Hall, Dr. John Frykman began a four-part lecture series on drugs designed to inform parents and other interested persons on what drugs are, what they do, and how to help someone suffering from their effects.

Frykman is the Carmel Unified School District's community counselor and one of the recognized experts on the youth drug scene in this country. He came to Carmel from the Haight-Ashbury Medical Clinic in San Francisco where he was former director of their Drug Treatment Program.

Informal and easy-going, he asked his audience to interrupt him whenever they had questions and joked about his spelling as he scrawled drug names on a slide projector plate.

"The first thing I want to make clear is that this is not a simple problem," he said. "There is no single solution, no 'either-or' answer to the drug problem."

He then distributed a short "Drug IQ Test" to the audience and asked them to answer all questions as best they could. "Then, at the end of the course, we'll take it again to see whether you've learned anything," he explained. The multiple choice "test" contained questions about names and effects of drugs that appeared Greek to most of the audience, including many of the teenagers present.

Frykman then recommended a short drug reading list, including his soon-to-be published book, "A New Connection" which will be brought out by Macmillan next month. He assured the audience that all proceeds from the sale of the book are being donated to the Haight-Ashbury Drug Treatment Center.

Speaking of the problems of drug education, Frykman said, "In most families I've found it's easier for them to accept the fact that their teen-age daughter is pregnant than that she's smoking marijuana. Once a person uses drugs, he becomes a 'freak,' and that label cuts off a person. Once we label him, we don't have to deal with him any more."

"A person who is an habitual drug user is sick," he continued, "and he is sick because he's part of a system that's sick. You can't treat a person who has been taking drugs and then return him to that same system and expect him not to relapse. We must correct the ills of the system so there can be good interaction."

He explained how parents of drug using teen-agers are being deluded. "Kids pop 'reds' (Seconal, a barbiturate) and get high; one Seconal equals two martinis in potency. Then they swish a little wine around in their mouths before they go home. The parent thinks the child is drunk on liquor, says, in effect, 'Oh, cool, he's fooling around with my drug,' and doesn't worry."

Seconal, he continued, has something of a mystique with kids. They are the most

"Kids need to experience drugs privately before they're ready for a group experience—before they're confident enough to share an outside drug experience like smoking marijuana at a party."

Because of the vital factual nature of this material, this article quotes extensively without attribution from a pamphlet excerpting Frykman's book, as well as from one of last week's two-commonly used barbiturate and are most dangerous when used in conjunction with another drug—alcohol—in the form of "beefed up beer" such as Colt 45. The alcohol increases the effect of the drug; the user apparently falls asleep, slips into a coma and then dies if not forcibly aroused and treated in time.

A youngster's first drug experience, says Frykman, usually occurs in his own home, using a drug found in the family medicine cabinet, which explains why 'reds' are so commonly used.

hour lectures.

xxx

Frykman gave the following breakdown of drug groupings, listed in the order of their most frequent abuse. The first group, sedative-hypnotics or "downers", are the most widely abused group of drugs.

SEDATIVE-HYPNOTICS (DOWNERS)

This family of drugs represents a wide variety of preparations which include the barbiturates (reds, yellows, rainbows, etc.); so-called minor tranquilizers, such as meprobamate (Miltown, Equanil, etc.); alcohol; freon gas (the pressurizing agent in spray cans); nitrous oxide (laughing gas); ether; a group of widely prescribed anxiety relievers (Serax, Librium, Valium); the bromides (found in over-the-counter sleeping medications such as Sominex and Nytol); and PCP (Sernyl). Marijuana could also rightly be placed in this family, but because it has some unique characteristics, it will be described separately.

The main effects of the sedative-hypnotics are to relieve anxiety. A person using them may pass through several phases. First he is pleasantly "high", then drunk or intoxicated so that coordination and speech are affected. As dosage increases, the drug induces sleep, and at higher dosage levels produces general anesthesia. If an overdose has been taken, the person may pass into a comatose condition and may die from heart or respiratory arrest.

"The great danger, and what is fairly common," Frykman said, "is that a person will use alcohol and barbs together. They have an additive effect in the system, and the person moves from sleep into a coma, and eventually dies from choking on his own fluids.

"The easiest way to tell if a person is asleep or in a coma is to run your finger over his eyelashes. If he is in a coma, there will be no reaction at all.

"To help someone in a coma, first see that he can breathe. Get him up and slap him ... whack him ... abuse him. Put him in a cold shower. If you have ice, put it on the genital area. Get his whole body to react.

"As soon as he is conscious, try to get him to vomit. The danger period is about 12 hours."

Physical dependence (where it takes gradually increasing doses of the drug to produce the same effect) and psychological dependence (where it becomes impossible for the person to function normally in his relationship with others or to maintain his life style without the drug) are serious dangers with the sedative-hypnotics. Many deaths occur due to overdose; barbiturate poisoning accounts for more deaths in this country than any other type of poisoning.

Barbiturate detoxification or withdrawal has many complications and must usually be accomplished in a hospital, because of the high risk of convulsions and other complications. Detoxification may take from eight to 12 days, depending on the severity of the dependence.

OPIATES - NARCOTICS (STUFF, JUNK)

This family includes the natural and semi-synthetic derivatives of opium (codeine, morphine, heroin), as well as a variety of synthetic products (Demerol, Percodan, Methadone, Dilaudid, and others).

The narcotics relieve pain and anxiety. At high levels they produce sleep, physical dependence and the danger of death from an overdose. A person "stoned" on heroin will often let a cigarette burn through the flesh of his fingers without feeling it.

Physical and psychological dependence build up rapidly with continuous daily use of opiates. Death comes quickly to those who overdose, usually in less than an hour.

"To determine if a person is in a coma from an overdose of narcotics, lift up his eyelids. The pupil will be totally constricted, a pinpoint," Frykman explained.

"Get him breathing and to a hospital immediately. He can be given something to counteract the overdose, and will respond almost immediately. He will be in deep pain, but he'll be alive."

The cost of maintaining a heroin habit can easily run as high as $100 to $200 per day. When dependence has been established, the person cannot stop use without precipitating withdrawal symptoms, which include loose bowels, muscle cramps, stomach pains, runny nose and/or eyes, vomiting, anxiety and nervousness (sometimes extreme), headaches, muscle aches and/or spasms, insomnia and a variety of other individual complaints. Detoxification takes from three to five days, although some complaints will continue longer. A person is usually able to cope with these symptoms if given minimal medical support, and if withdrawal takes place in the context of a friendly environment which is drug-free.

MAJOR STIMULANTS (UPPERS)

"Speed" (methamphetamine hydrochloride), cocaine, Benzedrine, Dexedrine, Wyamine and a wide variety of pep and diet pills belong to this family of drugs.

These drugs "speed" up almost everything about a person - breathing, heart beat, even speech. There is an almost abnormal cheerfulness, and the person is much more active than usual. Major stimulants are prescribed for depressing appetite, warding off depression and for putting off sleep in the treatment of narcolepsy.

"By far the biggest abuse of these drugs is found among housewives taking diet pills," Frykman noted. The "high" achieved from speed is a feeling of euphoria and a sense of maximum creativity and self-confidence. When a person first begins to use speed, there is some enhanced performance and concentration, but this diminishes rapidly with continued high dose daily use.

There is no clear evidence of physical dependence with stimulants, but psychological dependence can develop rapidly. Most people who use speed long period of depression. There is no fatal overdose with stimulants, although there have been reports of heart attacks and ruptured cerebral blood vessels as a result of the increased blood pressure attendant to their use.

In this same general category are the minor stimulants such as caffeine (coffee, tea, Coke), nicotine (tobacco) and sometimes Wyamine. The "high" is in "getting up" for things through their use, as, for example, the person who can't go to work without his compulsively don't realize that they have a problem.

"By far the biggest abuse of these drugs (major stimulants) is found among housewives taking diet pills..."

There are many adverse side effects from the use of speed. The usual loss of sleep and appetite result in fatigue and malnutrition, paranoid feelings, and a high incidence of hepatitis. To most who work with drug users, speed use is by far the most troublesome form of compulsive abuse. Withdrawal is usually quite painful psychologically, and with some persons also physically. It is followed by a morning coffee and/or cigarette.

There is some evidence of physical dependence with nicotine, though most of the dependence is psychological. These drugs are listed with the other drugs of abuse because (1) in some ways their use is more dangerous than that of most other abused drugs (the overall cigarette-related mortality in the United States is one every two minutes, according to the U.S. Public Health Service); and (2) they represent a very compulsive style of drug use (is it more compulsive to stick a needle into one's arm twice a day, or a cigarette into one's mouth twenty to sixty times a day?). During withdrawal from cigarette smoking, some of the same conditions of irritability and depression which accompany amphetamine withdrawal are present.

HALLUCINOGENS-PSYCHEDELICS

This category includes a variety of drugs known by their letters - LSD, DET, DMT, STP (DOM), MDA and TMA, as well as mescaline, peyote and psilocybin. Some naturally-growing substances have some of the same qualities, such as morning glory seeds, Hawaiian wood rose seeds, nutmeg and catnip.

Although these drugs cause an initial mild stimulation, the main changes are psychological. Perception is distorted. There is no physical dependence and the potential for psychological dependence is low.

The danger of hallucinogens is that the "trip" can sometimes precipitate a psychotic break, which can mean long-term trouble for the person involved. Suicides have occurred as a result of some "bad trips".

"If a person is having a bad trip, it is best to stay with him and help him live through the experience," Frykman said. "Try not to use medication to abort the bad trip. It has been found that there is a connection between a high dose use of difference: the sedatives release inhibitions stored in the primary brain areas, while the tranquilizers block off this primary area. Where the sedatives relieve anxiety by letting loose the deep centers of the brain, the phenothiazines tranquilize by locking in those same centers. This is one reason why they have been widely used to control psychotics.

There is no "high" with these drugs, just a depressing "down". Everything seems in control, but it is an unpleasant experience.

The greatest dangers with these drugs are the many possible side effects and bad reactions. It is also true that overdoses of phenothiazines are often used in suicide attempts.

MISCELLANEOUS DRUGS

Model airplane glue (toluene), automobile ignition spray, benzene, carbon tetrachloride, shoe polish, lacquer, paint and gasoline are among the common inhalants.

The effect of inhaling the fumes of these various substances is similar to that of alcohol and other sedatives, though of shorter duration. There is more drowsiness and more lethargy than with alcohol.

There are strong indications of psychological dependence being built up by glue sniffers. There is consistent reporting of permanent brain damage caused by glue sniffing. It may lead to liver and kidney ailments and cause aplastic anemia (the breaking down of bone marrow).

Amyl Nitrite is a drug that "Most people who use 'Speed' compulsively don't realize they have a problem."

tranquilizers to abort a bad trip and the appearance later on of "flashbacks."

Contrary to popular belief, there is no convincing evidence of brain damage, birth defects or permanent chromosome damage with the use of hallucinogens.

MARIJUANA-HASHISH

Marijuana is procured from the dried and crushed leaves and flowering tops of the female Indian hemp plant. Hashish is the most potent form and is made from the resin that forms on the flowering tops.

This drug relieves anxiety and disinhibits in the same way as sedative-hypnotics, tends to relax muscles, seems mildly stimulative in some persons. It has some psychological dependence for some persons, but does not produce physical dependence. At times it evokes experiences which have been likened to "psychedelic trips."

The greatest danger arising from the use of marijuana is the possibility of being arrested and charged with a felony. This danger is also present with the other drugs previously mentioned.

TRANQUILIZERS

This family consists of the phenothiazines, with such brand names as Thorazine, Mellaril, Sparine, Compazine and others.

These drugs have some features in common with the sedatives, for they slow down heart and breathing rates. There is an important is inhaled and has been used medically to relieve the pain of heart attacks. Folk myth has attributed aphrodisiac powers to this drug, so it is often used in connection with sexual activities. The normal result, however, is limited to a rather uncomfortable headache.

Angel dust and mint weed are two of a variety of smokeable replacements for marijuana. Usually these consist of parsley flakes or other vegetable material (sometimes alfalfa) impregnated with either PCP (an animal tranquilizer), a barbiturate or a hallucinogenic drug.

Mescaline, the active principle in peyote, has been synthesized in the laboratory. Frykman reported he has sent over 50 samples of "mescaline" to laboratories for analysis, and not one of them was found to be mescaline. Instead, they were either LSD, STP or "no narcotics or controlled drugs detected."

People are frequently "burned" when they buy drugs on the street and think they are getting one thing, but in fact are getting a different substance. He said that substances frequently sold for "speed" include sugar, powdered milk, Epsom salts, photo developer, Drano with magnesium removed and rat poison.

For psychedelics the common "burns" are aspirin, sugar substitutes, barbiturates and animal tranquilizers. For heroin, sugar, quinine, procaine and combinations of other substances are used.

Marriage unites two Carmel families

Two Carmel families were united recently by the marriage of Mary Jolene Weatherford and John Fill Morrice.

The parents are Mr. and Mrs. G. Ray Weatherford and Mr. and Mrs. John Buchan Morrice.

Both bride and groom are graduates of Carmel High School and Monterey Peninsula College.

The marriage was conducted by the Rev. Howard Bull at the Community Church in Carmel Valley.

After a honeymoon in San Francisco, the couple drove to their new home in Fresno where they are both studying for masters degrees and teaching credentials.

The bride was given in marriage by her father.

She wore a full length linen dress with a train. The dress yoke, sleeves and skirt were bordered with Venice lace. She carried a bouquet of daisies, yellow roses and ivy.

She also wore a gold locket formerly belonging to her grandmother and carried her grandmother's lace handkerchief.

Christina Morrice, the groom's sister, was maid of honor. Eleanor Morrice, the groom's sister, and Roberta Goulding of Carmel also

The bride, who grew up in Carmel, received a bachelor's degree from San Jose State College in June. She is specializing in elementary teaching.

While attending Monterey Peninsula College, the bride was selected as "student with the most outstanding character."

The groom, who also attended San Jose State, graduated from Fresno State College in June with a high scholarship record.

He played violin with the Chapman College, Monterey County and Fresno Symphony Orchestras, played as Carmel Arts Soloist and presented concerts this year with Mr. Rosenker's students at Monterey Peninsula College and played in a solo concert in May at Fresno State. He will continue to play in Fresno's symphony and to teach a few violin students in Fresno.

The groom was president of the Ham Radio League of Monterey County. He maintains a ham station, WB6ITM.

Marilyn Raeburn of Carmel assisted the bride through a series of showers and parties prior to the wedding and had charge of the bride's book.

A wedding in sunshine

Bright sunshine favored the family wedding which united Maryellen Mullaly Clowers and Harold George Thomas Jr. on Aug. 29, with the Rev. Howard E. Bull officiating at the 1:30 p.m. ceremony held in the Sanctuary of Community Church in Carmel Valley.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur B. Mullaly of Carmel Meadows. She attended Foothill College and Oregon State University, and is an X-Ray Technologist at El Camino Hospital in Mountain View.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold G. Thomas, Sr. of Millbrae are the parents of the groom, who is an executive at Aertech Industries, Inc. of Sunnyvale. He is a 1963 graduate of Yale University, and has been identified with the Electronics Industry since graduation.

The bride wore a candlelight chiffon and chantilly lace Empire gown, designed with a self-gathered train in back. Her ivory headpiece was topped with a chiffon bow and nylon net, over a pearl crown. Her bouquet was of gardenias and sweetheart roses.

Valerie Anne Mullaly, the bride's sister, was maid of honor. Peter R. Freed of

Lawrence Barber to wed Martha Todd Sept. 26

A Sept. 26 wedding is planned at St. John's Chapel by Lawrence Ray Barber and Martha Joyce Todd, son of Mrs. Irene Henderson of Carmel and the late L.C. Barber and daughter of Mr.

and Mrs. Edwin L. McPhee Jr. of Monterey.

Miss Todd attended Seabury Hall in Maui, Hawaii, Carmel schools and the Kramer School for secretaries.

She is the sister of Capt. Thomas E. Todd of Fort Leonard, Mo., and Carmel; Robert E. Todd of Ione; James Todd of Carmel; and granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold M. Todd of Sacramento, and Mr. and Mrs. Gird Percy of Ventura.

Barber attended schools in Yuma, Ariz., and Carmel.

He is the brother of Michael Barber of Carmel and grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Doc Ferguson of Lucerne Valley.

Janet Powers weds William Shanner

An unusual Valley wedding

Janet Powers and William S. Shanner were married Sept. 13 at St. Dunstan's Episcopal Church, Carmel Valley, the Rev. James W. Brock officiating.

The bride was given in marriage by her father, E. A. Powers of Carmel Valley. She wore an empire white satin gown with a crystal overlay and a fingertip veil. Her bridal bouquet was white baby roses and stephanotis with pink carnations.

One of several unusual features of the wedding was that the dresses of the bride's attendants were designed and made by Janet. Maid of honor was her sister Dawn Powers, gowned in white satin top overlaid with lace and a deep pink skirt. Similarly dressed, with lighter pink skirts, were the bridesmaids, Janet's other sister, Lynn, and Susan Tousey of Carmel. All three carried nosegays of pink carnations, yellow and white marguerites.

Best man for Bill, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William M. Shanner of Carmel was Lyndon Mahrt. Ushers were Takao Wakida and Tay Tousey, both of Carmel.

Susan and Tay Tousey, teen-age daughter and son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas G. Tousey of Carmel, became part of the wedding assemblage as sort of "adopted" younger sister and brother of the groom, who had been a boyhood neighbor.

While Bill served in Vietnam, Susan and Tay paid "big brother" the supreme compliment of naming their new puppy for him. The dog, now grown large, attended the outdoor part of the wedding reception adorned with a big white satin bow, the gift of Mrs. Shanner, Sr.

Another unusual feature of the wedding was the attendance of Father Brock's two young sons as acolytes at the ceremony. Earlier, Mrs. Brock and daughters Amy and Becky had given a shower for Janet. The girls' younger brothers Mike and Joe, not invited to the all-female occasion, felt left out. Having them serve as acolytes was the young couple's way of including them.

Both bride and groom are graduates of Carmel High School and Monterey Peninsula College. Bill is currently employed by the city of San Jose, where the couple will live.

Margaret Toy weds in Oregon

MARGARET RUTH TOY, a 1968 graduate of Carmel High School, married Steven E. Brown of McMinnville, Oregon, Saturday, Sept. 12 in the First Presbyterian Church of Salem. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James M. Toy, who owned Toy's Candyland on Ocean and Monte Verde. The family left Carmel in 1968 when Mr. Toy accepted a position with the Oregon State Forestry Dept. The couple are both enrolled at Oregon State University. Mr. Toy said, "We are getting used to Oregon but still miss Carmel and all its beauty."

The business scene

Only 29% of local business is local

By JAMES PETER COST
President, Carmel Business Assn.

FOR THE PAST TWO WEEKS I have used information from my earlier Carmel Business Association Newsletters. This week again I return to the newsletter for information that may be of general interest.

I mentioned last week that my limited survey took me to the city offices. That is where the work was done, but not by me. I want to publicly thank Bonnie Fischer, Hugh Bayless, Ralph Cowen, Bill Ellis, Clyde Klaumann, Art Plaxton and the many others in the city offices for all their help and time. All the facts and figures were gathered together by them. The interpretations and mistakes are mine.

Bonnie Fischer put together a list of names of all firms licensed to do business in Carmel. The names of the firms and types of businesses are public information available to anyone. However, no confidential information regarding licenses can be obtained. The list is much longer than the actual number of businesses located or headquartered in Carmel. Also, the original list totals more than the number listed below, but to put the business community in proper perspective here are some of the figures, (as of February, 1970):

- 71 Gift and souvenir shops
- 47 Restaurants
- 23 Food service stores
- 58 Ladies apparel stores
- 12 Men's apparel stores
- 58 Art galleries
- 32 Hair dressing shops (men's and ladies)
- 1 Parking lot
- 10 Gasoline service stations
- 10 Jewelers
- 32 Real estate firms
- 6 Drug stores
- 11 Architectural firms
- 4 Theatres
- 5 Tobacco shops
- 60 Motels and hotels with 809 units
- 10 Photo shops
- 12 Toy and hobby shops

IT IS NOT NECESSARY to be a college business major to realize that it takes a great many more than 4,712 people to support the businesses listed above. Altogether there are over 600 firms and individuals licensed to do business in Carmel. A facts and figures pamphlet issued in 1969 by the Monterey Peninsula Chamber of Commerce lists business licenses for the surrounding communities as follows: Monterey, 2,600; Del Rey Oaks, 100; Pacific Grove, 784; Seaside, 882; Sand City, 89.

A report by the Division of Accounting, State of California lists 402 California cities in order of population. Carmel is ranked 279th with 4,712 people. Lamoore is just ahead with 4,725 and Weed is just below with 4,686. Percentile ranking for Carmel would be about 43 percent or, number 57 on a list of 100.

If population ranking is compared with adjusted net tax (sales tax) ranking we find Carmel ranked 170th or with cities or 16,000 to 17,000. This would give Carmel a percentile rank of 62 percent or number 38 on a list of 100. That is quite an improvement. If adjusted net tax is divided by population, we get an adjusted net tax of $53.97 per capita for Carmel. These figures are for the sake of comparison only. Since they are based on taxable sales, we get an idea of the number of sales per unit of population. Los Angeles produces $22 per capita. Cupertino, actually ranked 170th in population, produces $19 per capita.

THE ARGUMENT IS PUT FORTH that Carmel has an unincorporated surrounding area that contributes measurably to both our population and our income. This is true but it is also true of most other towns and areas and therefore should either be discounted for Carmel or included in the comparison for other cities.

I would need a computer for weeks to figure the per capita A.N.T. for each town in the state, but a check of the outstanding money producing cities based on sales convinces me that Carmel produces the highest adjusted net tax per capita in the state and must be ranked number one on a list of sales per unit of population.

I interpret the figures to mean Carmel has an average daily population of about 11,500, or an average of 6,788 visitors and shoppers per day. Many factors could be and should be considered to give an accurate picture, but we get an idea of how we stand according to population and sales with other cities in the state.

For comparison, I will list below several cities, their rank according to population, their population and their total adjusted net tax for '69-70.

THE ADJUSTED NET TAX, as I pointed out last week, is the amount of the sales tax returned to the city by the state collected on taxable items sold. The amounts shown represent about one percent of total sales on taxable items.

RANK	CITY	POPULATION	NET TAX
1	Los Angeles	2,929,600	$67,514,750.
2	San Francisco	756,900	23,486,600.
7	Sacramento	263,303	6,614,100.
8	Fresno	168,600	4,429,550.
15	Berkeley	120,300	2,268,000.
54	Salinas	58,500	1,589,200.
59	Palo Alto	56,000	2,258,850.
79	Seaside	36,616	368,800.
106	Santa Cruz	29,300	930,100.
120	Monterey	26,750	880,850.
187	Pacific Grove	14,506	117,950.
191	Watsonville	14,076	550,300.
199	Laguna Beach	13,300	435,750.
212	Gilroy	11,250	272,250.
278	Lamoore	4,725	69,300.
279	Carmel	4,712	254,350.
280	Weed	4,686	60,950.
402	Amador (last on list)	202	775.

My figures indicate roughly 71 percent of our business comes from the out of Carmel and roughly 63 percent comes from off the Monterey Peninsula. Either that or Carmel residents are the buyingest people in the State of California.

In either case, for a city whose almost entire industry is storekeeping, we are indeed fortunate to have such a high ratio of sales to population.

VISION CARE

BY DR. R.E. MARLIN
(consulting optometrist)

Q: Can eye exercises improve your vision?

A: Visual training, or "eye exercises" is an effective and necessary means of caring for many visual problems. It is designed to produce comfortable and effective seeing -- not to get rid of necessary lenses. All eyes do not automatically learn to function perfectly, while others seem to lose some skill over a period of time. When coordination, rapid and accurate eye adjustments are not possible, the result is headache, low achievement, fatigue. Many visual problems of both children and adults are of this type and require visual training whether or not glasses are worn.

The "throw away your glasses" idea is appealing -- but unfortunately not scientifically sound. The person who discards his glasses thinks he sees better without them because of his motivation or dislike for eyeglasses.

Jane Nickols to entertain

The Carmel Woman's Club, at its opening meeting of the Club Year 1970-71, Monday, October 5, will feature Miss Jane Nickols in "Musicals in Miniature", a guided tour of the high moments of love and laughter on the musical comedy stage, Mrs. F.C. Galland, program chairman, announces.

Miss Nickols has done radio and television work in San Jose and San Francisco, and has been performing her "Musicals in Miniature" throughout the Bay Area since 1960.

She will be accompanied by Miss Ferne Hammond. Pouring at the tea following the program will be Mrs. Catherine G. Boise, Mrs. Willis A. Potter, Mrs. Fred J. Reynolds and Miss Effie Theobald. Assisting Mrs. Wilhelmina Klein, hospitality chairman, will be Mrs. John J. Adams, Miss Alma Anderson, Mrs. W. McChapman, Mrs. Howard Currier, Mrs. Fred Davis, Mrs. Dagne Eide, Mrs. Beulah T. Gilman, Mrs. J.C. Hale, Mrs. Viola Mills, Mrs. Permia Roeber, Mrs. Raymond F. Taylor and Mrs. Rolf J. Ullestad.

The meeting will be held at 2 p.m. at the Clubhouse, Ninth and San Carlos, Carmel.

Flowers are to be donated through the kindness of the Carmel Valley florists.

Sunrise... to Sunset

October and falling leaves are just around the corner and with Fall season upon us, our regularly scheduled activities are about to begin, and our beloved Maestro Taeuber is deep in rehearsals for opening night at Sunset, Oct. 5.

He is equally busy these days with rehearsals for the Beethoven Festival, programmed for Oct. 17, at 3 p.m. at the Carmel Mission Basilica for the presentation of Missa Solemnis, a "do not miss," to be sure. This is indeed a beautiful climax to the Bi-Centennial celebration and will be the grand finale of the year. Since Father Serra, Founding Father of this Peninsula, and whose remains lie on the Mission Grounds, it is most appropriate, the final event of the 200th Anniversary of Monterey be held on those hallowed grounds.

On Oct. 2 and 3, Hal Roth will present an unusual story of the first circumnavigation of the Pacific in a small sailing yacht, "Whispers Pacific Voyage", an award-winning film, full-length, feature film, in color of an 18-month, 18,538 mile voyage of a very brave couple afloat on the high seas. Tickets will be available at the door, and the time is Friday, 8:15 p.m. and Saturday, 8:15 p.m., Oct. 2 and 3.

The lobby of Sunset Theater will be the scene of a very fine exhibit, in keeping with the opening of the Symphony and George Downs, noted for his fine water-colors will be the featured artist; he was on the faculty at Berkeley, in the Architectural Department, and has many one-man shows of this very special media. We are pleased to announce he will host the exhibit each weekend, beginning October 2nd, 1-5 p.m., for the month of October. We are looking forward to this show and many more fine displays to follow.

Altho our Forest Theater series is over for this season, I'm happy to announce Musicians Union of Monterey is sponsoring the Beyer String Trio for a free concert, through a grant from the Recording Industries Fund, presents this program to the community for the purpose of creating greater interest in live music performances. Raymond Fabrizio, Flutist, and Wade Parks, Pianist, will be the featured soloists. Mark October 18th on your calendar for this all Beethoven Concert.

We have many fine things on the fire for the coming weeks, so drop in to see our Master Calendar that Eleanor Melvin updates for the latest happenings on our busy Peninsula.

Sincerely,

Senior citizens urged to file for property tax assistance

The deadline for filing claims for 1970 Senior Citizens Property Tax Assistance is less than one month away. To date, less than 51,000 California senior citizens have filed claims.

The deadline is Oct. 15 for senior citizens to file claim forms for a reimbursement of a portion of their 1969-70 property taxes.

To be eligible for Senior Citizens Property Tax Assistance, claimants must be over 65 years of age as of Jan. 1, 1970; must own and occupy their own home; must have paid property taxes on the home; and must have a total household income of less than $3,350.

Qualified individuals can obtain claim forms from any office of the Franchise Tax Board or by writing to Senior Citizens Property Tax Assistance, P.O. Box 1588, Sacramento, Calif. 95807.

'Virginia Woolf' coming to Carmel

Edward Albee's "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?", one of the truly big American successes of the century, will be the first play of the 1970-71 Community Theatre season, opening Oct. 2 at the Circle Theatre, Carmel.

"Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" is a drama of jolting power and frankness. It is recommended for mature adult audiences only, and is not at all recommended for children.

When the play opened in New York in 1963, it became an overnight sensation. It ran for 660 performances, and won all the prizes awarded in the spring of 1963.

This play is a great many things. It is a horror play written by a humorist. It is a brilliant piece of writing. As quoted by Time Magazine: "The weapons are words - vicious, cruel, unspeakably humiliating, unpredictably hilarious - the language of personal annihilation. Jabbing, slashing, eviscerating each other are a middle-aged history professor and his wife. Sharing this diabolic conversation pit are a younger faculty couple who start as passively trapped bystanders and finish as guilty fellow victims. In the long and lacerating annals of family fights on stage, there has been nothing quite like "Virginia Woolf".

The play is being directed by Community Theatre managing director, Michael Keller, with Gloria Wheeler as production assistant. Rick Mannheim is stage manager, and Ruth Fry is in charge of properties. After its opening on the 2nd, "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" will play Fridays, Saturdays and Sundays through Oct. 31, with all performances beginning at 8:00 p.m.

This Sunday, Sept. 27, auditions will be held at the Circle Theatre for the second play of the season, "Life With Father", a comedy by Howard Lindsay & Russell Crouse.

H. Howard, Jean McBride, Brenda Handy, Anita Tonn, Margaret Heater, Emma Jane Hansen, Frankie Bakun and Betty Hughes. "The Women" may be seen Friday, Saturday and Sunday nights at the Studio through October.

'The Women' opens fall season at Studio Theatre

It should be made clear at the outset that "The Women", which opened last week at Carmel's Studio Theatre, has nothing at all to do with the Women's Liberation Movement, now claiming a great deal of the nation's attention.

Unless you associate liberation with divorce, which is very much what "The Women" is all about. Plus a lot of acerbic dialog about women's cruelty to one another, and how they are helpless pawns in a man's world.

Bill Asp directs the famous Clare Boothe Luce play which enjoyed a fabulous run on Broadway a generation or so ago. That may seem like a long time away to many, but really times haven't changed that much. "The Women" is just as zesty, yeasty and entertaining as it was back in the distant '30s.

Asp certainly has his hands full in this fast moving comedy, shuffling a large cast of females on and off the stage, and into and out of scenes from New York City to Reno and back.

The audience Sunday night enjoyed every minute of it. The featured roles are divided among a half dozen or so talented actresses. The action largely revolves around Mary Haines, played by Margaret Heater, whose husband of 12 years finds a young paramour; faced with this dilemma, she takes off for Reno, reluctantly gets a divorce (along with some of her 'friends'). On returning to New York later, she finds that the new Mrs. Haines is busy with a new boy friend. Well, the old Mrs. Haines swallows her pride and you can guess the outcome.

Crystal Allen, the other woman, is played by newcomer Brenda Handy, and she may very well be a comer.

Particularly noteworthy also are Anita Tonn as Sylvia Fowler, the busy-body gossip who contributes to other's marital problems and winds up with her own; Betty Hughes as Nancy Blake, a witty writer with an equal talent for biting sarcasm; Frankie Bakun as Miriam, who purloins Sylvia's husband; Jean McBride as Edith Potter, whose uninterrupted pregnancies make of motherhood a questionable occupation; and Mary Payne and Peg Ross who make a lot out of their vignette roles.

Stage manager Paul Boczkowski deserves commendation for his fine work, too.

"The Women" plays weekends (Friday through Sunday) for the next six weeks. It's all pure fun in the high style of comedy which Mrs. Luce made famous, and shouldn't be missed.

'OUTER LIMITS' AT M.P.C.

"The Outer Limits," a series of four forum sessions designed for "exploring the physical and mental limits of man and his universe," will be offered at Monterey Peninsula College as a community service during October and early November.

The series will feature such diverse "explorers" as space scientist Albert R. Hibbs, science-fiction writer Ray Bradbury, mountain-climber Luther Jerstad and "Moog" artist Douglas McKechnie in everything from an illustrated lecture to a concert—all by way of dramatizing the "outer limits" theme.

SINGLES DANCE

The Monterey Bay Singles Club, a social club for single adults, will hold a dance at the Monterey Elks Club, 150 Mar Vista Drive, Monterey, Friday at 9 p.m.

Remember When?

10 YEARS AGO

From the Pine Cone, Sept. 22, 1960:

"The perennial problem of our time once again confronts the citizens of the Carmel Unified School District. Our schools are becoming overcrowded," Loyal Wiekhorst said yesterday, in explaining why the school board has asked voters to approve a $1,995,000 bond issue when they go to the polls on October 4.

xxx

With a force of more than 200 volunteer solicitors sweeping through the residential area under the direction of co-chairmen Mrs. Mike H. Dormody and Mrs. Michael D. Elliott and businessmen calling on their fellow merchants under the direction of Kurt Koebig, Carmel tonight has 40 percent of its $32,000 Community Chest goal in the money bag.

xxx

Photographer Steve Crouch (you see his excellent work frequently in the Pine Cone) has sold a color picture series of the Jolon Road to the Ford Times.

25 YEARS AGO

From the Pine Cone, Sept. 21, 1945:

Pon Chung says that the Hitchcocks gave him the house he has lived in for twenty years at Seventh and San Carlos, and that if the Niels Reimers says he has to get off the property, which Reimers has bought, then he, Pon, will take his house with him.

xxx

George Warfield has opened law offices in the Theatre Building on Ocean Ave.

xxx

Carmel Theatre Thursday feature: "Betrayal from the East" starring Lee Tracy and Nancy Kelly and "Crime, Inc." with Leo Carrillo, Tom Neal and Martha Tilton.

xxx

Down town with their new daughter for the first time last week, Dr. and Mrs. H.H. Huntington held informal reception in front of Kip's where friends gathered around the baby buggy to meet Patsy. Source of high entertainment were her "shoes." No old fashioned footwear would do for Patsy. Her crocheted booties were open-toed.

50 YEARS AGO

From the Pine Cone, Sept. 23, 1920:

Mrs. J.F. Foster and Cousin Mollie Allen came down from Oakland last Sunday afternoon for a stay of at least a week. Oh yes—Pumpkin came too.

xxx

"The Copperhead," a great picture, is to be given at the local theatre tonight. This is a dollar show. The prices here will be 20c and 40c. ("The Copperhead" starred Lionel Barrymore.—Ed. note)

xxx

Weekly trips to San Jose and classes at the Monterey High School have made it necessary for Thomas V. Cator to have a car, and no sooner said than done, he's now driving a Briscoe.

xxx

Bob Leidig and his mother were in San Francisco for three or four days last week.

A HOME BY THE SEA that provides a permanent, protected, panoramic view of Carmel Bay, and a close-up view of the otters at play. Custom-built and carefully planned for the present owner it has panelled living and dining room walls, 2 bedrooms and 2 baths, a sheltered patio accessible from living room and kitchen, and a single garage plus an extra carport. This is an excellent market value at $79,950. Exclusive listing.

ADOBE AND REDWOOD HOME set in a forest of trees. This 5-bedroom home has been especially planned for comfortable family living. Its two level plan has 4 bedrooms, 2 baths and a fireplaced family activity room with easy access to outdoors, all on the lower level for the youngsters. Upper level features a 30' living room, a spacious dining ell, well planned kitchen, and a huge master bedroom and bath. Offered at $59,500.

IT'S THE LITTLE TOUCHES that make a house a home, and the little touches here would possibly be a white picket fence, white shutters, a bouquet of spring flowers, and someone willing to do a little painting. The house has a cozy chalk-rock corner fireplace in the living room, a tiny but separate dining room, a sunny kitchen, 2 bedrooms and a tiled bath. The price is $25,950.

Families, Now Hear This!

We've just listed a remarkable family treasure, and here are the facts: On a large street-to-street lot, in handsome, easy-care landscaping, a freshly painted white home of some seven years in age offers approximately 2487 square feet of convenience for family living -- for which it was carefully planned. Park on the quiet street and walk up the garden path which leads to the hospitable entry area, with an inside 12-foot hall guiding traffic to the 24-foot carpeted living room with its attractive fireplace and an ocean view deck, or the 10' x 13' dining room, or the very convenient kitchen with its built-in breakfast nook, or the wing with the 3 bedrooms and 2 baths. An easy stairway takes you to the lower level, which can also be approached by a separate entrance from the other street, which offers a 4th bedroom, the third bath, and a grand 24-foot family room. Fireplace here, too. In fact, this whole level would make an ideal living unit for one of your older teen agers, or your parents who live with you. It's also great for the big billiard table, or ping-pong, or parties, and acoustical ceilings soften family activities. There's a double garage and off-street parking, and a handy bus for your non-drivers. It is located in the lower part of Carmel Woods, just outside the city limits. We respectfully submit that for the price of $51,500, you will not find its equal on the present market, and we are prepared to prove it. Challenge us!
